ILLINOIS VOTE PROBE STARTS

Vermilion County Men Hurry To Confess.

THOUSANDS WILL BE DISFRANCHISED

Is the Opinion of Grand Jury Foreman

Foreman of Jury Is Sort of a David Harum Philosopher and Would Stick His Right Arm in the Fire If He Thought It Was His Duty, and He Believes His Duty Is To Probe Vote Buying

Danville Ills Jan 19—By ones and wos they are sneaking over to Isaac Woodward's home some times late at night so that no one will see them and they are telling this square jawed David Harum kind of a financier the story of vote buying and vote selling in Vermilion coun the home and bailiwick of Uncle Joe Cannon

And these secret visits will probably result in open visits—and then a wholesale flocking to the grand jury room to take an immunity bath

In political circles it is conceded that there has already been a leak and that the grand jury has secured sufficient evidence to conduct a thorough investigation into the charge that political corruption has been as prevalent in Vermilion county as it was in Adams county Ohio

Up to date there has not been a breath of suspicion directed toward Speaker Cannon and it is admitted on all sides that the speaker's skirts are absolutely clear of the mire of corruption

That 7 00 voters who have either bought or sold ballots will be disfranchised is the belief of Isaac Woodward the foreman of the grand jury

When Judge Kimbrough called attention of the grand jury to the charge that vote buying and selling was prevalent he considered his duty done States Attorney John F Lewman took the position that it was his duty to present to the grand jury such evidence as was presented to him but he did not think he ought to be made a detective in seeking the evidence

Sees His Duty

Woodward took an entirely different view of the matter The judge had told him to investigate the bribery charges It was, therefore his duty Woodward would stick his right arm in a fire and hold it there until it was burned off if it was his duty He is a Ridge Farm banker and a determined capable man He doesn't live in Danville but his financial interests have kept him in touch with every action taken here in years

And Woodward is going to the bottom of the charges He is ridden of the belief that there has been vote buying and selling Already a number of voters have confessed to him He expects to take them before the grand jury and make them repeat their stories

With these confessions to work on he intends to bring others before the grand jurors And we'll disfranchise 2 000 voters in this county said Woodward today

The disfranchisement of such a number of voters it is said will have a peculiar effect upon the political complexion of the county There has been a bitter struggle on for years between the wets and the drys The results have always been close Each side has won repeatedly The drys now confidently assert that if 7 000 voters are disfranchised they will be wets and that the drys will carry the county at the next election

There is a story going the rounds here today that a recent primary election drain on the politicians was so great the money was soon expended and 2 000 voters unable to get their votes got disgusted and left the polls without voting

Bill Will Not Be Introduced Says Senator Money.

Washington Jan 19—"No currency reform bill will be introduced and no report will be made by the monetary commission to congress at the present session, said Senator Money Democrat, of Mississippi, a member of the commission today It would be utterly impossible to have a report ready before the March adjournment The commission in all probability will present a partial report to congress next December

The fact that no issue will be raised at present on the Aldrich plan has led members of congress to take no active interest in the matter Those who are coming back next winter say they will study it during the congressional recess

SPIES SHOULD BE PUNISHED

The Moon Measure Is Reported Favorably.

MOON WILL PRESS BILL TO PASSAGE

Pennsylvanian Discusses His Pet Measure.

As Evidence of Need of This Legislation Congressman Cites Instances Which Are Investigated by War Department in Manila, Calcutta, Tokyo and on the Pacific Coast—Takes up Spy Matters.

Washington, Jan 19—Representative Moon, of Pennsylvania, author of the bill designed to punish spies operating on United States territory in time of peace, which yesterday was reported favorably to the house said today he would press the bill to passage at once He said that with Japanese spies overrunning the Philippines and with reports constantly coming in of attempts of foreigners to make sketches and photographs of our harbor fortifications on both seaboards, he believed the time had come when drastic action must be taken As evidencing the need of this legislation, Congressman Moon cites several instances which have been investigated by the war department

In Manila, in April, 1910, an enlisted man in the engineering corps was approached by two officers of a foreign nation and offered $25 000 for a set of photographs of the interior works of Corregidor He reported the offer to his colonel and took the pictures When about to transfer them to the foreigners, the trio was arrested and an attempt made to punish the bribe offerers Habeas corpus proceedings effected their release

Spy Memoranda.

A short time ago blueprints of the Corregidor island defenses were picked up on the street in Calcutta by a British subject They were sent to the war department They were of pocket size, accurately executed with accompanying tabulated military information as to the height of guns above the sea, location of searchlights fire control, mine stations, etc No one but an expert could have prepared them, and the whereabouts of the original tracing is still unknown, although it is shrewdly guessed to be in Tokyo

The war department files contain numerous memoranda according to Moon as to the persistent activity of foreigners mapping the Pacific coast from Los Angeles to Seattle It has been impossible to stop this because of the lack of law bearing on the subject

STATE SPRINGS BIG SURPRISE

When It Rests in the Schenk Poison Case.

DEFENSE WILL CALL WITNESSES

Accused Woman Is in Good Spirits Today

Trial Judge Jordan Shocks Both the Prosecution and Defense When He Declares Pork Packer Should Have Been Called—Defense Will Finish Its Case Within Three Days—Prisoner Says Nothing

Wheeling W Va Jan 19—The prosecution in the trial of Mrs Laura Farnsworth Schenk charged with poisoning her millionaire husband John O Schenk rested its case at 11 15 a m today

Prosecutod Handlan's announcement that he would be ready to conclude his testimony taking before the noon recess was a surprise to Mrs Schenk's attorneys who were not prepared to produce their first witness until late today or Friday

The direct examination of the defense's witnesses was scheduled to begin immediately on the resumption of court at 2 p m

I have absolutely nothing to say' Mrs Schenk said

Trial Judge Jordan surprised both prosecution and defense when in overruling the latter's usual motion to exclude the state's testimony he declared that Schenk would have been admitted as a proper witness regardless of the attitude of the prisoner's counsel

A state law specifically forbids the introduction of a husband's testimony against the wife or vice versa except by the other's consent

'I would have admitted John Schenk's evidence irrespective of the statute,' Judge Jordan said If a man assaulted his wife and there were no witnesses, it would be monstrous if she could not testify against him In this case the alleged offense was committed on Schenk And I certainly would have adjudged him a competent witness"

Prosecutor Amazed.

Prosecutor Handlan expressed his amazement at the court's ruling "While it is too late now to talk of summoning Schenk, I would not have taken the risk of invalidating my case by calling him The law is specific"

Attorney Frank O Brien Boyce's co-counsel, said the first witness to be called this afternoon would be one heretofore unmentioned in that connection He refused to give the witness name

The defense will produce at least 200 witnesses according to Boyce It expects, however, to wind up its side within three days

Many of the 200 will be Wheeling doctors and druggists, who are expected to testify that Mrs Schenk did not buy arsenic from them

We will have forty experts to rebut the state's medical testimony Attorney O Brien said

All three lawyers insisted today that the prisoner will take the stand but Prosecutor Handlan laughed at the announcement

Ninety three forthwith subpoenas were issued by the defense just before noon adjournment All but six are for druggists and physicians

In the ten days of the trial the state has produced eighteen witnesses Handlan said he had a reserve list of thirty some of whom may be called on rebuttal and fourteen others whom he eliminated as necessary factors in his case making a total of sixty two

Things Brought Out

From these witnesses statements the prosecution has established this fabric

That analysis disclosed large quantities of lead and arsenic in Schenk's drinking water and medicine that Mrs Schenk did not want her sick husband to get well that she consulted fortune tellers as to the time of his demise that she was infatuated with a man fifteen years her junior that she offered a woman detective $1 000 to give knock out drops to her husband and that she purchased lead and attempted to get arsenic from a Wheeling physician

Included in the list of the defense's witnesses are Mrs Klein the detective nurse and Dr J W Myers Savage attacks upon these two witnesses credibility are expected

The last two witnesses on the state's side were Herbert O Bier druggist, and Dr D B Post Both were recalled solely for cross examination

Attorney O Brien's effort to bring out that Schenk had symptoms of Bright's disease was overruled by the court

Schenk's symptoms did not then indicate lead poisoning Best said, but the bowel trouble from which Schenk was suffering might have indicated lead poisoning

SEVERE BLOW GIVEN TORIES

England Is Stirred by Daily Mail's Statement.

A BIG POLITICAL SENSATION SEEN

Bomb Drops in Ulster County Movement.

London Mail's Statement That Ulster County Is Not Arming To Resist Home Rule Is Taken To Mean That Lord Northcliff the Mail's Owner Is Having His Eyes Opened to Masses' Cry

London Jan 19—The biggest blow that has yet been struck the Tories of England in their effort to defeat the promised home rule measure of the Liberals was delivered today by the Daily Mail owned by Lord Northcliff which declared that it was untrue that Ulster county in Ireland was arming to resist home rule

The publication caused the biggest political sensation of recent months and is believed to foreshadow a flop by Lord Northcliff to the Liberal party

The story that Ulster was arming to resist home rule has been played up by the Conservative press for weeks in the hope that it would scare the lords into throwing out the home rule measure when it reaches the upper house It was said that $3 000 000 had already been raised by the Ulstermen a big order placed in Germany for guns and that military leaders were already drilling soldiers in the streets

The Daily Mail today says that it has made the closest investigation of these reports and has found them absolutely untrue"

It is admitted that the Mail's changed attitude will do much to destroy the Ulster county hopes Friends close to Lord Northcliff are authority for the statement that he is gradually having his eyes opened to the popularity among the masses of the Liberal program and is preparing to support it with all his newspapers and magazines

WEST VIRGINIA POLITICAL PLOT

Two Senatorships Are Pawns in Game

CARDS ARE STACKED AGAINST DEMOCRATS

Watson and Chilton May Not Get Seats

By Staying Away from State Thus Preventing a Legal Quorum Republican Senators Say Election of Watson and Chilton To Succeed Davis and Scott Will Therefore Be Illegal—Present Situation

Cincinnati Jan 19—Two United States senatorships are the pawns in the game of high West Virginia politics one end of which is being played by the Democrats in Charleston the capital and the other by the Republican runaways late senators luxuriously domiciled at the Sinton hotel in Cincinnati

By staying away from West Virginia the fifteen Republican senators prevent the forming of a legal quorum and it was declared by the voluntary exiles in Cincinnati today that the election of the Democratic United States senators Watson and Chilton will therefore be illegal

Possession of the governorship gives the Republicans the upper hand in this game and in all likelihood Nathan B Scott and Davis Elkins Republicans will continue to represent the state of West Virginia in the United States senate for at least two years more

Governor Glasscock it was stated by the exiled state senators today will refuse to give the new Democratic United States senators their commissions and thus prevent them from taking their seats in the United States senate

Cards Stacked

The fifteen state senators if necessary intend to remain in Cincinnati forty five days the legal term of a legislative session after which Governor Glasscock declaring that the Democratic senators were not legally elected will make a recess appointment of two Republican United States senators

As the legislature does not convene again for two years the state of West Virginia will continue to be represented by Republican United States senators

A special session of the legislature can be called in the meantime at the request of two third of the members of the legislature but although the West Virginia Democrats have a majority they have not a two thirds majority

Thus the cards are stacked against the Democrats unless they are willing to make concessions

ELLEN HUNT STILL ALIVE

Proves to Legislators She Can "Come Back"

SHE SEEKS REDRESS FROM THE STATE

And Is Not Discouraged at the Setbacks.

Cleveland Woman Has Been Asking Legislature for Years To Reimburse Her for Injuries Alleged To Have Been Inflicted Upon Her While She Was Inmate of State Insane Asylum in Cleveland.

Columbus, O Jan 19—Ellen Hunt of Cleveland is back

This may not mean much to the casual reader or the first term legislator, but the older members of the house and senate know that the brief sentence carries the information that Ellen Hunt is still seeking redress from the state for injuries she believes were inflicted upon her long ago

The old time legislator believes Ellen Hunt the most hopeful of women For many years she has been coming to the legislature seeking the passage of a bill which would financially reimburse her for damages she says were sustained by her unlawful incarceration in the State Hospital for the Insane in Cleveland Her efforts have always been in vain

Despite her many setbacks Ellen is not discouraged She is back again this session with the same old claim Representative Greeves of Cuyahoga county, Wednesday introduced a bill asking that $10 000 be appropriated for her She hopes to win this time with a new legislature

Ellen Hunt was sent to the hospital in September 1887 and detained there until October 1899 She always maintained that she was not insane After her release she started a long fight for vindication It took her eight years to win her fight Then the common pleas court corrected the probate court record and granted her contention Since that time her fight has been to have the state make some monetary payment to her

Senator and Representatives have so far not been won over to her point of view She hope for different result this year but says she will continue the fight even if she meets with still another refusal

MORGAN MAKES A CLEVER MOVE

By Throwing Sop to Various Independents.

TELEPHONE MERGER MEASURE TO PASS

Since the Bell Interests Show Their Hand.

The Morgan People Promise Ohio Independent Companies They Can Have the Smaller Fields as Bell Interests Only Want Big City Business and Long-Distance in the Smaller Places—Peace Reigns.

Columbus O, Jan 19—One of the most formidable sources of opposition to a telephone merger bill, prominent last year against the Elson bill has been stopped in the present session by a clever move of the Morgan interests in throwing a sop to the independents The telephone people hope the winning over of the independents will spell success for the merger bill soon to be introduced

In the last session the independents fought hard against the Elson merger bill Since its defeat the Morgan interests have been busy removing the opposition of the independents They did this by promising them that they could have the smaller local fields all to themselves Now the independents are for a merger bill Many of them are already in Columbus talking for such a measure

But there is one feature of getting the local field to themselves that is bothering some It's the fact that before they secure this monopoly, they must buy out the Bell interests wherever there is such a plant

Setting Price

The price they must pay will be set by the Bell people and this may be too high to be reached by them. It may be that the Bell people will be the ones to do the buying in the end

The Morgan interests tell the little fellows that all they want in the small cities and towns is the long-distance business They have brought the independents around to the point where they accept this statement and they now see themselves in supreme control of the smaller local fields

Telephone employes are against the merger bill almost to a unit They say it means a reduction in the force of operators linemen, clerks etc of at least one third

The merger bill is expected to be introduced any day now Wednesday had been set for the day to bring it out, but for some reason the action was delayed

THE HEAVENS FOR THE MONTH OF JANUARY

Hints for the Local Students of Astronomy.

THE STARS VISIBLE DURING THE MONTH

Henry Norris Russell Gives a Fine Review of the Astronomical Arrangement and Events—What the Astronomers Are Viewing and What Is of Greatest Interest.

In modern methods of scientific research rather curious situations sometimes arise, as is illustrated by a recent case, when an astronomer sent in a requisition for the purchase of "2,000 pounds of ice, for use in astronomical observations." What the ice was used for, and how successful were the results, is told in a recent paper by Professor Stebbins, of the University of Illinois, who has for some years been working on the measurement of starlight with the aid of the selenium photometer.

This last phrase may seem to increase the puzzle. What has the rare element selenium to do with astronomy? Things become comprehensible when it is remembered that a thin sheet of this substance, suitably prepared, decreases in electrical resistance when light falls on it. By putting such an apparatus at the focus of a telescope, and pointing at a bright star, the amount of light received may be measured, by means of the deflections of a sensitive galvanometer.

Temperature changes affect the selenium largely; hence the use of the ice, forming a large "pack" about the case in which the selenium cell was contained, and protecting it from variations of temperature.

Having got this apparatus in efficient working order, Professor Stebbins has made a long series of measurements on the variable star Algol, with very interesting results. The accuracy of measurement of which the new apparatus is capable is very high, so that the well-known changes in Algol's light, during the eclipse which it suffers at regular intervals, can be very accurately followed.

Continuing the observations throughout the period, it was found that, half way between successive eclipses of Algol by its invisible companion, a small, but undoubted diminution of light took place—just at the time when Algol itself could eclipse the companion; showing that the latter was not wholly dark, but gave out light of its own.

The eclipse of the companion by the principal star, however, cuts off but six per cent. of the combined light of the two; while, when the principal star is eclipsed, about sixty-two per cent. of the combined light is obscured. The small loss of light in the former case is imperceptible to the ordinary eye, which explains why it was not previously detected, though a long series of observations with the best visual photometers — instruments for measuring the light of the stars by direct observations—would doubtless have revealed it.

Besides all this it appears that the combined light of the two stars, when no eclipse is taking place, is least when the companion is nearest us—almost, though not quite, in front of the bright star—and greatest when it is almost, though not quite, behind it. Professor Stebbins explains this by assuming that the companion is brighter on the side toward Algol where the radiation of the bright star heats it up.

It may be remembered in passing that a similar phenomenon was detected by Professor Dugan of Princeton in the case of a much fainter variable star of the same kind—right ascension—and explained in the same way, two years earlier.

From the complete "light curve" showing the whole course of the variation of Algol's brightness, the brightness and dimensions of both stars can be found, taking the distance between them as the unit of measure. To find this distance, which measures the velocity of the orbital motion of the bright star. As the faint star can not be spectroscopically observed, some assumption concerning its mass or density is necessary. Making the assumption, which seems very plausible, that its mass is one-half that of the bright star, Mr. Stebbins arrives at the following conclusions:

The bright star is 1,250,000 miles in diameter—a litle less than one and one-half times as big as the sun. Its mass is three-eighths that of the sun, and its density only one-eighth that of the latter. The fainter star is still larger, about 1,450,000 miles in diameter—or one and two-thirds times that of the sun—while its mass is but three-sixteenths, and its density only one-twenty-fifth that of the sun. The centers of the two stars are just 3,000,000 miles apart, and they revolve about one another in a nearly circular orbit in sixty-eight hours, forty-nine minutes. The plane of the orbit is inclined about 7¾ degrees to the line joining Algol to the sun, so that the eclipse as we see it is partial, rather more than one-fourth of the diameter of the brighter star being unobscured.

The principal star is about nine times as bright as the brighter side of the companion and fifteen times as bright as the fainter side. To compare these with the sun's brightness, we need to know the distance of Algol, which is unfortunately so great as to be almost beyond the limit of measurement.

It is probable, however, that the brighter star, though of only about twice the superficial area of the sun, gives out at least fifty times as much light; while the faint companion, though long regarded as a dark body, because its light was so small a fraction of the whole, gives out at least three times as much light as the sun, even on its fainter side.

It is easy for any one to see for himself the changes in light during the present month, minima observable in our longitude occur at 11 p. m.—Eastern Standard time—on January 1st, 8 p. m. on the 4th, 5 p. m. on the 7th, and so on, coming three hours, eleven minutes earlier on every third night till they are again conveniently observable at midnight on the 21st, 9 p. m. the 24th, and so on.

We find the splendid group of constellations, of which Orion is the center, filling the southern sky. The Pleiades are almost overhead. Below them comes the larger group of the Hyades, including the red Aldebaran. Orion is next, and then Canis Major, recognizable at once by the incomparable brilliancy of Sirius.

Below Orion are two constellations which, though small, are fairly conspicuous, and are shown in our initial letter. Lepus, the Hare, is an ancient constellation, mentioned by Ptolemy. Its principal configuration is a small quadrilateral of stars of the third and fourth magnitude directly below Orion.

Columba, the Dove, which is south of this again, is a relatively modern group—being supposed to represent Noah's dove, in the biblical story of the deluge. It contains one bright star of nearly the second magnitude, which may be found by carrying a line from Procyon through Sirius to an equal distance on the opposite side.

West of these is the huge extent of Eridanus—a winding stream of faint stars, beginning near Orion, and pursuing a zigzag course down to the southern horizon, and indeed below it, for Achernar, its brightest star, is visible only from points below the thirtieth parallel of north latitude.

In the eastern sky we find Gemini and Canis Minor, with Leo and Hydra rising, and Cancer, with the faint star cluster Praesepe above the latter. The Great Bear is coming up in the northeast, the Dragon and the Little Bear are low in the north, and Cassiopeia and Cepheus are in the northwest above Cygnus, which has nearly set. Auriga and Perseus are overhead, and west of them are Aries and Andromeda. Pegasus is lower down in the west, Pisces next to the southward, and finally Cetus, setting tail first.

Mercury is theoretically an evening star till the 10th, when he passes through conjunction with the sun, and becomes a morning star; but he is actually so near the sun all through the month as to be almost invisible. Venus is an evening star, setting only about half an hour after the sun at the month's beginning, but remaining in sight at its close till an hour and a half after sunset. Mars is morning star in Scorpio, rising about 5 a. m. He is over 200,000,000 miles away from us, and so does not appear very bright. Jupiter is likewise a morning star, but rises much earlier—a little before 2 a. m. on the 15th. Saturn is the only one of the planets visible in the evening sky. He is a conspicuous object on the border of Pisces and Arias, and remains visible till a little after midnight. On the 20th he is in quadrature with the sun, and is due south at 6 p. m. Uranus is in conjunction with the sun on the 16th, and is invisible this month. Neptune is in the very opposite quarter of the sky—being in opposition on the 11th—and is visible all night long. His position on the 15th is R. A., seven hours, twenty-six minutes, twenty-six seconds declination, plus twenty-one degrees, eighteen minutes, forty seconds, and his daily motions plus seven seconds in right ascension, and plus fifteen seconds in declination.

The moon is in her first quarter at 1 a. m. on the 8th, full at 5 p. m. on the 14th, in her last quarter at 1 a. m. on the 22d, and new at 5 a. m. on the 30th. She is nearest us on the 12th, and farthest off on the 24th. In her circuit of the sky she passes near Venus, Uranus, and Mercury on the 1st, Saturn on the 8th, Neptune on the 14th, Jupiter on the 23d, Mars on the 26th, Mercury again on the 28th, and Uranus on the 29th.—Scientific American.

THE AGOSTA FARMERS' INSTITUTE SESSIONS

D. D. Harsh Gives an Illustrated Address.

THE SCIENCE OF THE MODERN FARM WORK

Many Helpful Suggestions for the Up-To-Date Farmer—A. W. Jones Gives an Explanation of the Various Corn Tests—Other Features of Excellent Program.

Agosta, O., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—This morning's session of the Agosta Farmers' institute was opened at 9:30 o'clock with music by the orchestra.

D. D. Harsh, of Minerva, gave an illustrated talk on "Scientific Farming." Mr. Harsh gave many helpful suggestions by his chart talks.

Mr. Harsh was followed by L. G. Spencer, of Niles, who also gave an illustrated talk on "Potato Crop, Early and Late." He told of what the farmers were doing in his section of the country along this line and of the progress they were making. He said that potatoes were a good crop because in selling them the farmer did not sell much of the fertility of the soil.

A. W. Jones, of LaRue, gave an explanation of the corn variety test when the system of education of today does not meet the requirements and a new system must be adopted. The system of today does not in any way cling to the farm and that is one of the reasons why young men leave the farm.

Miss Enola Howison, of Ashley, recited "Uncle Pareas and the Deed." She responded to an encore. Paul Jones, of near LaRue, gave "A Modern Miracle." He spoke well and was highly applauded. Mrs. Floyd Perry, of LaRue, sang a solo that was very pleasing, and D. D. Harsh gave an address on "How To Have Good Neighbors." "The Farm Feeds Them All" was sung by the Drake brothers quartet. Miss Ella Marsh, of LaRue, rendered very nicely a piano solo and Lawrence Sager, of LaRue, recited "A Colored Man's Appeal." He did very well and responded to an encore. The program was closed with a short address by Rev. Mr. Clare, of Prospect.

C. O. Barnthouse then delivered an address on "Why the Young Men Should Stay on the Farm." He said the city looks attractive to the young man of the farm, and that the country and farmers seem slow. That to be somebody he thinks he should go to the city. He is not given any share of the profits of the farm and he thinks he is of little importance. One reason Mr. Barnthouse gave was that nature is calling the young man to stay on the farm and by staying there he could keep close to nature and he can have pure food. Living is much cheaper on the farm than in the city and he can lead a more independent life.

L. G. Spencer gave an interesting talk on "The Problems of Soil Fertility." He said: "The farmer in selling his products sells a certain per cent. of the soil fertility and in a few years the fertility of the soil will be gone and the farmer will have to make a new start. The most important part in getting back to the soil fertility is by under drainage. The farmer should adopt a system of farming that is to sell his product without selling any part of the fertility that can be avoided."

Evening Session.

At 8:30 o'clock the Mt. Olive band opened the evening session with music. Miss Bessie Pieffer and Miss Zelda Briggs, of Meeker, gave a duet, and L. G. Spencer followed with an interesting talk on "The New Agriculture." He said the time had come when a new system of education must be adopted. It is impossible for the farmer to go away to school, but there are other ways in which he may be educated, such as agriculture by the agriculture press, the experiment station and the department of agriculture. The time has come on the farms of W. B. Wislow and E. E. Drake, of near Agosta. This brought to a close the morning session.

This afternoon the state speakers will judge the corn on exhibit, and W. P. LaRue, of LaRue, will give an address on "High Cost of Living." D. D. Harsh will talk on "Thistle Knocks" and "Breeding and Care of Swine." L. G. Spencer will give an address on "Clover Boosts" and the program will close by the election of officers and music by the Agosta Ladies' quartet.

Friday Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session on Friday convened at 1 o'clock with music by Baker & Grimm's orchestra. D. D. Harsh gave an address on "Needed Legislation and Laws," in which he said that the farmer should ask for a law compelling agriculture to be taught in the public schools. He said schools should be centralized to give the country boy and girl a change as well as the town boy and girl. "We ought to have a law that every note, mortgage and other papers of legal value should have the assessor's name attached," said Mr. Harsh. "We should also have a pure seed law." He also mentioned several other needed laws and gave many helpful suggestions along that line.

CHIEF OF BILLION DOLLAR TRUST STARTED AT $4.50 A WEEK

New York, Jan. 14.—James A. Farrell, the newly chosen president of the United States Steel corporation, is one of the most interesting figures in the business world today. Mr Farrell, who has been identified chiefly with the export business of the steel corporation, is well known to all the men of the trade and stands for those things which make his selection as president very gratifying to them. It is understood that he is in favor of peace, and under his management of the steel corporation it is thought that no rate war will be waged. His rise to the $100,000 a year position is one of the most remarkable successes in this country, as he was a laborer at $4.50 a week when he was only sixteen years old. He is of athletic build, over six feet tall and weighing 220 pounds. He is married and lives at 219 Garfield place, Brooklyn. His family consists of five children—two girls and three boys, one of whom is at college.

CARL HAGENBECK'S PREHISTORIC ZOO

Representatives of Ancient Masters Seen in Animal Park.

The latest attraction at Carl Hagenbeck's famous animal park at Stellingen, near Hamburg, is a series of representations of the great monsters that inhabited this earth in the distant past. In all thirty have been erected, but more are to follow.

These beasts of the past occupy a portion of the grounds to themselves. They have been built up of cement by J. Pallenburg, around the shores of a little lake.

The animals are depicted standing by the water's edge amid the shrubs and trees, while in the lake itself, says the Strand, are shown huge crocodiles and strange looking creatures, half fish and half mammal. Additional realism is added by representing a few of the beasts in the act of battling with specimens of their kind.

There are several representations of the dinosaurs, including the iguanodon, which towers some twenty-five feet into the air, making the trees around look quite small; the diplodocus, whose length of sixty-six feet and height of eighteen feet render the modern elephant a mere pigmy; the stegosaurus, with its bony plates on its back and spikes on its tail; the triceratops, with its three horns on its face and huge collar of spikes around its neck; as well as representations of the sloth, dodo and mammoth.

Then there are huge flying reptiles with an enormous spread of wings, birds with formidable teeth, not to mention giant lizards, tortoises and toads, compared to which the present living specimens are in size no more than a dog to a cart horse. Some of these tortoises and toads are twelve feet and more in length.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

A bare broom splinters matting easily. If you have no long-handled soft brush, make a gray canton flannel covering for the top of the broom.

Grease on a kitchen floor can be softened by pouring kerosene over it and letting it remain for ten or fifteen minutes. Then scrub with soda water.

A frying basket should be dipped in boiling water or heated in the oven before being put in the hot fat. It will thus not reduce the temperature of the lard.

Stale macaroons, which can be bought cheap at the baker's, make the tastiest addition to puddings and custards if pulverized and sprinkled over the top.

When next scrambled eggs are served make a tomato sauce, adding to it a few Spanish peppers, chopped fine. This will be a delicious accompaniment to the eggs.

When postcard photographs curl and become brittle rub them over with a cloth dipped in a cupful of water, to which a teaspoonful of glycerine has been added, to soften them.

The white cotton crepe waist if smocked with oil blue is exceedingly pretty.

FASHION AND FADS.

Sleeves of different lengths and different colors are worn in the same gowns.

The broad cemture or girdle seems to be appearing again on the very latest frocks.

Dainty undermuslins in the advance spring styles are richer than ever with embroidery.

White braids are seen on many of the white serge and mohair tailored and dressy suits.

Kid gloves on the glace order and usually white are worn with any evening costume.

White, pink, light yellow and American Beauty shades are used for dancing gowns.

Polished wood buttons of cloth, and silk colors, are in great favor for polo and storm coats.

Paris has a new fancy for shading her feathers and even her veils as well as her gowns.

Irish lace bands—carrying out the Irish lace vest or collar—so much worn—adorn many sleeves.

Big white flowers, poppies, edelweiss, etc., in velvet or in kid appear upon some of the latest large hats.

A great many velvet bags have come in and satin ones outnumber those which appeared last spring.

Veils of solid colors—blue and brown, lavender and even black—have brilliant borders in three to five shades.

Handsome beaded bags show no signs of waning in popularity, but the ones done with tiny beads are the thing.

Evening wraps are as gorgeous as any one can afford, including fur, satin, velvet, cloth, tapestry, brocade, beaded decorations.

Tea gowns often have hanging sleeves, and the peasant sleeve cut in one with the bodice is by no means as yet discarded.

Chains are no longer in evidence for the black velvet bags, all have long silk cords by which to swing them from the arm.

Fine threads, fine dots, fine meshes and a general delicacy of structure and design are predominating features of the new veils.

THE SPEAKER WINS.

The house of Representatives has returned to the old precedent that the rules of the house are the laws under which that body must act, and cannot be changed in the twinkling of an eye when they embarrass someone, even a majority, of the members in their hurry to work certain legislative reforms. Last March there was a majority of the house who sustained the contention that an amendment to the rules was a high constitutional privilege; but when the same claim was put forward with the same arguments, a large majority sustained the speaker's ruling and the precedents against such contention.

In thus reversing the action of last March the Democrats were wise enough to see that consistency is not as important as future embarrassments. They realized, no doubt, that with responsibility coming to their party they could not escape meeting this question in the future, and that they might as well reverse themselves and get back on firm parliamentary ground now as later. They are in better position for their confession of a former error, for it can not be charged that political exigency was the prompting for the reversal, as would have been the case had they waited until they came into power in the house.

The one significant thing in the whole contest over the rules is that the house has overwhelmingly voted that the speaker was right and the house wrong on March 19, 1910, when a majority refused to sustain the identical ruling which he made yesterday.

Old Dr. Johnson said that "the law is the measure of civil right, but if the measure is changeable the extent of the thing measured can never be settled." It should be a matter of self-congratulation for the speaker that the majority of the house has returned to his position and the old measure of parliamentary law. Had the Democrats waited until the next congress to give this evidence of saneness, it would have had a partisan tinge that would have aroused the suspicion that they were not willing to live under the same rule as a responsible majority that they were willing to have put upon the house when they were only a political minority.

We congratulate the speaker that the confession of error has come from his political opponents in the same congress in which his ruling was made, and that the action of yesterday wiped out the pretended political nature of the so-called revolution nearly a year ago. It was just a temporary aberration in a place where revolutions should never be tolerated, for the lawmaker should above all others respect law and not find more opportunity in the constitution for defiance of law than does the citizen who must live under the laws.—Washington Post.

UNDISCOVERED GENIUS.

If there are people who still believe the old familiar talk about genfuses who remain mute inglorious Miltons because the magazine editors are blind to unknown talent they should read an interview with S. S. McClure in the Sun.

Mr. McClure was once an undiscovered genius in the publishing line, and kicked himself up until he developed a most successful newspaper syndicate. He went to England to look for new writers to keep his syndicate going, and he hustled about among the old hands in the business. Sidney Colvin, the biographer of Stevenson, told him he wanted to look out for a young fellow named Kipling; that, in the language of the trade, he was a "comer." At that time Kipling was so unknown that McClure had to ask how to spell the name when he made a memorandum of it. He spent a whole day with George Meredith, about as unlikely a source of material for a newspaper syndicate as can be imagined, but Meredith told him that the coming man was J. M. Barrie. Then he spent another day with Andrew Lang, and Lang warned him to look out for another young fellow who had just had a shilling shocker out, and had a book coming from a good publisher. He bought two papers with reviews of the book on his way back to London. One said it was a wonder any respectable publisher would allow his name on the cover and the other that the book ranked between "Westward Ho" and "Kidnaped." The book was "Micah Clarke" and the shilling shocker was "A Study in Scarlet."

That was the day before either Kipling, Conan Doyle or Barrie had got his nose above water, yet three leaders of English literature had found them out and were praising their wares so effectually that an American syndicate man bought enough of their stories to start them well on their road to fame. Those of us who have not been able to sell our short stories or novels may as well resign ourselves to the uncomplimentary belief that it is because they are not good enough to sell. They are probably "good enough to be better," but not good enough to

A thin coat of potash left on the sink overnight once a week will remove the ugly yellow stains that will not yield to kerosene. It should be applied with care, as it is poisonous.

Paint and varnish can be easily removed from the hands by first rubbing well into them some grease or lard, then washing with soap and water.

Among the 800,000 inhabitants of Jamaica there are 100,000 who live on an average income of about 12 cents a day.

LAST OF HIS RACE GOES TO POORHOUSE

Charles Moss Makes an Appeal for Charity.

HAUTEUR OF SPIRIT REMAINS UNBROKEN

A Three-Quarter Blood Wyandot Indian Reaches the County Infirmary at the Age of Seventy-Four—Speask English and Has Smattering of French.

An Upper Sandusky special to the Ohio State Journal says:

Over the trail on which he once stalked with the brothers of his tribe on errands of war or peace, Charles Moss, three-quarter blood Wyandot Indian, tramped to the county infirmary yesterday afternoon. He is seventy-four years old and not very strong, but the hauteur of his spirit is unbroken, despite the necessity of appeal to the "paleface" for charity.

Moss' Indian name is not known, and he did not tell it to the directors, although he speaks English fluently and has a smattering of French in his vocabulary. The French was acquired from his father, who was a half-breed Frenchman of that hardy breed of trappers who came down from the Canadian wilds when all Ohio was a wilderness. Moss' mother was a pure blood Wyandot.

Moss is perhaps the last of his race. He still walks erect, though he suffered yesterday from a driving rain as he stood outside the door waiting for Director Conn Baker. To Baker he talked little, after the manner of the red man.

From the fact that he has been selling herbs about the country from a little cart which he pushed before him, it is believed that he was the medicine man of his tribe in the days when Wyandot was a name that struck terror to the hearts of foemen.

As a side line, Moss mended umbrellas. He is declared to be a perfect wizard with a balky rain guard. He has the acquiline nose of the Indian and something of the courtesy of the French.

To Baker he said he was born in what is now Wyandot county, near Upper Sandusky. He has had a life more or less romantic, but he lifted only a little of the veil of his history. He said a sprained ankle, which caused him much pain, was the only thing which now caused him to seek charity.

The best thing to dust furniture is a large, soft paint brush which has been dipped in olive oil and squeezed almost dry. This will take up every bit of dust, without sending it flying about.

CHICAGO DIVING DEEP INTO INVESTIGATION OF CULT LEADER, EVELYN ARTHUR SEE

Chicago Jan 11 Police investigation of the "inner thought circle" of "absolute life," a quasi-religious cult with headquarters at 2342 Racine avenue, culminated in the arrest of the three members of the "circle," two of them young girls, and the disbanding of their followers Evelyn Arthur See, leader of the cult, faces the most serious charges of those arrested His companions and co-workers Mildred Bridges seventeen years old, and Mona Rees, who appears to be about Mildred's age—were taken into custody and sent to the Harrison Street station after they and See had confessed that the activities and aims of "absolute life" had brought the latter into questionable relationship Stephen Bridges, a wholesale jeweler and father of Mildred, said, "The man has ruined my home" See and the two girls were taken to the police station separately See was the first to admit the practices for which his teachings stood He admitted that he had initiated several married women into the mysteries of "absolute life" on various occasions and that at times they had lived with him in the "temple" These women, he said, assisted him in the commonwealth. These children of the neighborhood were taught the rudiments of "absolute life" Mona Rees said she had been living with her father in Portland, Oregon, until four years ago, when she came east at the suggestion of her mother to take up studies with See Though she does not look more than a child, she claims to be twenty-five years old It is possible that the police will withdraw the charges against the girls when their cases come up at the Chicago Avenue municipal court See is married, but has been separated from his wife for seven years Mrs See, herself the "founder and proprietor" of an independent religion, lives at 1247 Lasalle avenue The trial of See promises to be a long and sensational one

MANY BIG EVENTS OCCUR IN THE MONTH OF JANUARY

Events That Have Changed the Course of History.

QUEEN ELIZABETH IS CROWNED IN JANUARY

In January 1788 the First Company of English Settlers Sails Through Summer Seas to Australia—The Great Mogul Dies in January 1707—Some Other Happenings.

When Juan Diaz de Solis, cruising down along the coast of South America, discovered a new port January 1, 1513, it was the height of a tropic summer, and he named the port Rio Janeiro in honor of the day.

It was January 13, 1534, that Vasco Nunez de Balboa came back to the little town of Darien after he had discovered the Pacific ocean.

On January 26, 1788, the first company of English settlers sailed through summer seas to Australia

January has been rather an eventful month for England in several different ways. It was January 18, 1486, that Henry VII married the Princess Elizabeth, daughter of Edward IV., and so ended the "Wars of the Roses by joining the houses of York and Lancaster.

It was on a January day that Henry VIII married beautiful Anne Boleyn. He died January 28, 1547. Twelve years later, Januury 15, 1559, his daughter, Elizabeth, was crowned queen.

Less than a hundred years after Elizabeth came to the throne England was to see for the first time in the history of the world a king beheaded by his own subjects, for it was January 30, 1649, that Charles Stuart lost his life.

For hundreds of years this day was kept in fasting and mourning by Royalists all over the world. On the other hand, says the American Boy, some of the descendants of the Puritans kept it as a feast day. Many people still living in this country remember eating calf's head for dinner January 30, though they do not always know why it was done.

It has been said that revolutions always begin in summer, but by an odd freak of destiny both the kings who have been victims of revolutions met their fate in January, for Louis VI. of France was guillotined on the 21st of January, 1793.

In January, 1788, Charles Stuart, Prince Charlie, who had landed in Scotland more than forty years before to fight gallantly to win back the throne of Great Britain, died exiled and almost forgotten, an old man, in Rome.

In the days when speaking pieces was part of the Friday afternoon program in every school many a boy began solemnly to recite "The Burial of Sir John Moore," but very few of them had any idea who the hero was or when his burial took place. He was in the British army in America before the end of the Revolution, he fought against the Irish in 1798 and he was killed fighting Napoleon in Spain at the battle of Corunna, January 16, 1809. So it was on a January night that his friends went through the weird ceremony and "left him alone in his glory."

A little more than 200 years ago, January 21, 1707, the Great Mogul died, the last of the Moguls of India. Today his name is only a proverb, for people still say "As rich as the Great Mogul," but during his lifetime the tales that were told of his thrones crusted with precious stones, his treasure chambers full of gold and diamonds, emeralds, rubies, sapphires, were not only wonderful but true.

The French jeweler, Tavernier, saw and handled some of these jewels and it is supposed that the Great Mogul diamond was split and recut and that part of it is now the Koh-i-noor of the British crown jewels. The Great Mogul ate from golden dishes and drank from a cup of carved rock crystal, and one of his thrones was completely inlaid with diamonds

All through January in 1764 there was a great frost in England, and it is said that the ice on the Thames was five feet thick On January 27, 1309, a great storm swept over a part of England and blew down what was known as King John's Castle at Old Ford near Bow.

The union of Great Britain and Ireland took place January 7, 1801, and we probably owe to this a great part of the early Irish population of the United States, since many patriotic Irishmen rather than yield to the hated power of England betook themselves to America On January 13, 1847, the Young Ireland party formed the "Irish Federation" which enrolled 150,000 men, and the results of this struggle against England, together with the famine year brought another great Irish migration to our shores.

January has the credit of still another event which has changed the world's history and which happened in our own country. Gold was discovered in California, January 14, 1848. Seven years later January 27, 1855, the Panama railroad was opened and got its share of the gold of the returning Californians and the gold seekers who had money enough for travel by that route And the first telegraph was established January 6, 1844, and the first penny post and postage stamps in the world came into being in England January 10, 1840.

PHENOMENAL GAIN IN THE POPULATION

The Census Reports Show Marion Has 18,232.

PLEASING SURPRISE FOR MARION PEOPLE

The Reports Show the City Grows Rapidly and Has a Larger Population Than Residents Had Reason To Believe When Report of County Is Received.

Marion's population is 18,232. The official announcement was made by the census bureau at Washington Saturday

Although the census is not as large as had been hoped for, still it is larger than conservative estimates put it when the total census of the county was announced as 23,971 in November

Marion, during the decade, made the phenomenal gain of practically fifty-four per cent. The government census in 1900 was 11,862, thus a gain of 6,370 is shown. The population in 1890, when Marion was chartered as a city, was 8,327. This shows that in the two decades the city has gained over 119 per cent., or 9,905 in population.

The gain in population in the county within the past decade has more than been made by the city, showing conclusively that Marion has drawn heavily from the country and the villages

In 1900 the population of the county was 28,678 and in 1910 it is 23,971, showing a gain in the ten years of only a little over eighteen per cent., or 5,293.

For the same period the gain in the city was 6,370. Thus it will be seen that the city of Marion has actually gained from the country districts and the villages of the county, 1,077.

The following shows the population of the county from the time it was established.

Census of 1830, population, 6,551; 1840, population, 14,765; 1850, population, 12,618; 1860, population, 15,400; 1870, population, 16,184; 1880, population, 20,565; 1890, population, 24,727; 1900, population, 28,678; 1910, population, 23,971.

From the time the county was organized in 1830, it has grown about 419 per cent., or 27,420.

The first settlers of Marion county were almost all native-born Americans, but in 1830 immigration began from Germany, settling in the southern part of the county. The increase in the county from 1830 to 1840 was remarkable. In 1830, it will be seen by referring to the above figures, the population of the county was 6,551. It had increased to 14,765 in 1840.

The decrease showed in 1850 is accounted for by detaching territory from the county in forming Wyandot and Morrow counties in 1845 and 1843

The German immigrants continued to pour in, however, and, during the decade from 1850 to 1860, large numbers began to arrive from Ireland as well.

It will be seen from the foregoing that Marion has outstripped all her neighbors. Against her 18,232, Delaware has 9,076; Bucyrus, 8,122; Kenton, 7,185; Bellefontaine, 8,235, Galion, 7,214, with Upper Sandusky and Marysville not given in the 5,000 class.

KIME IS DISMISSED BY JUSTICE CONLEY

No Evidence Adduced To Sustain Charge.

LeRoy Kime, of Mt. Gilead, formerly employed by Dr. F. M. Baldwin as a mechanician, who was arrested on a charge of grand larceny preferred by Dr. Baldwin, was discharged by Justice Charles H Conley after a preliminary hearing, Friday afternoon.

Eight witnesses were examined, but not a scintilla of evidence was adduced that would lend to place Kime guilty of the offense charged Dr. Baldwin accused Kime of taking watch and a pair of pliers about $17.75. Kime denied the charge and testified that he had left all the stuff exposed to view and that he was defended by Attorney Miller of Mt. Gilead.

THE CIRCUIT COURT REPORTS FINDINGS

Alleged Violators of Liquor Law Are Denied Hearing.

NOT ALLOWED TO FILE PETITIONS-IN-ERROR

Mayor and Common Pleas Court Reversed in Matter of George Morrison—Proceeding of Reber Against Clark Is Sent Back for Another Trial—Other Findings.

Friday, January 13, with all the omens that the day and the date portend had no terrors for Circuit Judges Silas E Hurin, W. H. Kinder and Michael Donnelly, who reported their findings before a small assemblage of attorneys that morning at 9 o'clock, after having been in executive session since Wednesday afternoon.

The circuit court denied W. P. Fetter, John O'Keeffe, John J. Seitz and David Washeim, convicted for violating the Rose local-option law, the right to file petitions-in-error in the circuit court; reversed both the mayor and the common pleas court in the two cases against George Morrison, who was charged with keeping a place where intoxicating liquors were sold and with selling them contrary to the statutes; reversed the common pleas court in the error case of Lenox Reber against George W Clark and others and remanded it back to the common pleas court for retrial; dismissed the petition of the plaintiff at the costs of the plaintiff in the appeal of Charles H Halsey against the commissioners of the Brooks free turnpike road and others and overruled a motion to strike the petition from the files in the error proceeding of Henry Sauer against the state of Ohio, Sauer being an alleged violator of the Rose law.

In the Morrison cases a peculiar feature was developed by the decision handed down by Judge Hurin. Morrison is employed by W. P. Fetter. He was arrested and fined in the mayor's court for keeping a place where intoxicating liquors were sold and for selling. He was fined $200 on the latter charge and $300 on the first charge. Fetter at the same time had been convicted for keeping the place and fined $500.

Morrison Gains $100.

Judge W. H. Henderson in the common pleas court held that Morrison could not be fined separately for the same offense. He sustained the mayor in his fining of Morrison for keeping a place where intoxicating liquors were sold, but reversed him in his fining of Morrison for selling. Morrison and the state both carried the cases up on error to the circuit court, and as a result Morison is saved $100 by reason of the fact that both the common pleas and the mayor's courts are reversed. That is, he will have to pay the fine of $200 in the one case instead of $300 in the other case. The circuit court held that Fetter was the proprietor of the place and that Morrison could not therefore be fined for keeping a place where intoxicating liquors were sold, but as his bartender he was guilty of selling.

A motion to strike the petition from the files in the case of Henry Sauer against the State of Ohio was denied because the court held that it was not necessary for the defendant-in-error to receive a summons-in-error. The state claimed that no summons-in-error had been served, and Judge Hurin declared the parties were already in court and no summons was necessary. The case will now be heard on its merits at the next term. Sauer was arrested, convicted and heavily fined by the mayor for giving a friend a drink of whisky. The common pleas court affirmed the lower court.

"The Rose law makes no exceptions, except as to druggists and private residences," declared Judge Kinder in denying John O'Keeffe the right to prosecute error in the circuit court. "He owned a restaurant and seven pints of whisky were found in a safe in his place of business Under the statutes he had no right to keep whisky in his place of business."

Whisky for Hunting.

"It seems that when you go hunting in Marion county you must have a little whisky to take along," said Judge Donnelly in the case of David Washeim, who was denied the right to prosecute error. "But two pints are a little too much for this county. Now, they might carry that much with them about Maumee, when the boys went fishing, but I doubt whether that amount was necessary for David Washeim and his supposed friend who were going hunting in Marion county. Washeim was arrested for keeping a place where intoxicating liquors were sold His place was the same as a saloon before the town voted dry. His place was searched and nothing was found about the place, but in Washeim's pockets were found two pints of whisky. He said he bought the whisky at Bucyrus and kept it in his room until a few minutes before the police came and that he had just taken it from his room to go hunting with a friend. He was keeping a restaurant, and the business of selling whisky is the business of most restaurants where saloons had been before the town voted dry. We didn't make the Rose local-option law, but it must be obeyed. If the people don't want it let them vote the town wet. We think this man guilty and deny him the right to prosecute error."

In the John J. Seitz case Judge Hurin declared that Seitz had prostituted his home for the purpose of violating the Rose law in selling intoxicating liquor. He did not think that the absence of a seal on the affidavit would render the affidavit illegal. He though the wording of the affidavit was defective, but not sufficient to cause it to be invalid, because it set forth very plainly that Seitz kept a place where intoxicating liquors were sold and that he did sell the same.

The Reber Matter.

In reversing the common pleas court in the case of Lenox Reber against George W. Clark and others, Judge Donnelly criticized the trial judge, because he had not clearly instructed the jury as to the value of the property involved on both sides. George W. Clark purchased from Lenox Reber the old Millholland Pressed Brick company's plant and in exchange traded four houses and lots and a coal mine in the southern part of the state.

The transaction was supposed to represent $12,000. Clark brought suit in the common pleas court for damages, claiming that Reber had defrauded him and that the plant and the brick practically were worthless, and not first-class as had been represented. A jury gave him a verdict of $8,300.

Reber carried the case to the circuit court. Judge Donnelly declared the jury could not have come to any conception of the value of the property involved from the charge and instructions of Judge W. E. Scofield. Because of error in the judge's charge and instructions, the case was remanded for retrial. "There must be some stability of making a case Somebody has said that it is not so much the law as it is to know the certainties. The trial judge ought to have been able to say to the jury what the property was worth from the evidence."

The suit of Charles H Halsey against the commissioners of the Brooks free turnpike road was brought to prevent the construction of the road on the ground that the original petition filed with the county commissioners was dead. After failing to do anything after the first notice was advertised the commissioners readvertised and used the same petition. Judge Kinder held that it was not necessary to file a new road petition, and dismissed the petition of the plaintiff, Charles H. Halsey.

MRS. SCHENK'S TRIAL FOR ATTEMPTED MURDER EMBRACES MANY REMARKABLY STARTLING PHASES OF ALLEGED CONSPIRACY

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 12.—Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk, wife of John O. Schenk, who began life as a country waif, her father having disappeared and her mother being accounted weakminded and sent to an institution—this woman, who in her twentieth ysar had made of herself the wife of a millionaire, is on trial accused of attempting to murder this same millionaire deliberately and, indeed, if the assertions of her legal prosecutor are in the least true, diabolically, slowly made him ill with poison, then poisoned his medicine, and then, on all that, poisoned the very water that was put to his fever parched lips in the night watches of the sick chamber. The prosecutor said the discovery that she had poisoned even the drinking water in the sickroom of the man she tried to kill came when her own daughter, Virginia, her first child, drank of this water and became deathly ill from arsenic poisoning. "This woman not only tried to kill her husband, but in order to accomplish this object she was willing to sacrifice the lives of those around his bedside and even, gentlemen of the jury, willing to sacrifice her own children." It is to be a truly remarkable criminal trial if forecasts are realized. On one side is to be presented the inhuman wife and mother, while in the woman's cause her lawyers will plead that she stands now as the object of a contemptible and frightful conspiracy; that ever since she escaped the drudgery and lowliness of a housemaid's life by winning the love of John Schenk, whose father made the millions that the family now possess, the Schenk family has been bitterly antagonistic to her; that socially she stood as a stumbling block between them with their latterly acquired millions and the position that they aspired to attain. Openly before the jury her attorneys, the O'Brien brothers, cried in reply to the state prosecutor: "Ever since she married John Schenk his brother Albert has been her bitter enemy. For years he has tried to part John Schenk from his wife. He has always snubbed her. He has ordered her out of places where he found her. This woman, daughter of a weakminded mother, which is surely no fault of her own, knows nothing of poisons. She has been forced into this position merely through circumstances arranged to put her out of the way. We'll prove that to you, gentlemen."

JOSEPH SLANSER BUYS LOCAL LUMBER PLANT

Will Have Plant in Operation by Spring.

Late Thursday afternoon, Joseph Slanser, owner of the Slanser planing mill and lumber yards at LaRue, closed a deal whereby he will become the owner of the property of the defunct Greenwood Street Lumber company, formerly the Implement company, on north Greenwood street. The property was sold by Hoke W. Donithen for a consideration of $8,000.

Several weeks ago the same property was sold at sheriff's sale to F. M. Smith, a representative of the Continental Lumber company in Chicago. The sale was confirmed and, by a mysterious switch, the deed was made to Hoke W. Donithen, who claimed to be Smith's attorney. Papers in a suit against Donithen were prepared by Attorneys Crissinger & Guthery, counsel for Smith, and they were taken to the office of the county clerk for filing, but before they were ever filed a tentative settlement was effected and the papers were withdrawn. It was said that the Wollenweber Lumber company was an interested party.

The new owner expects to have the plant in operation by spring. A number of extensive improvements are contemplated.

JUDGE SILAS HURIN WILL RETIRE SOON

Will Be Succeeded by Phil M. Crow of Kenton.

FINAL VISIT OF THE JUDGE IN MARION

The New Judge Will Begin His Duties in Kenton Next Month. Judge Hurin Retires from the Bench With a Reputation for Excellent Judgment in His Work.

By a coincidence Phil M. Crow, of Kenton, who was elected to the circuit court bench to succeed Judge Silas E. Hurin, of Findlay, figuratively speaking, will don the official ermine in his home city next month.

Judge Hurin made his last trip to Marion as circuit judge, last week He will retire February 9, at which time the circuit court will be in session at the Hardin county capital. When Mr. Crow ascends the bench the political complexion of the circuit court will be Democratic. Judges Michael Donnelly and Crow being Democrats and Judge W. H. Kinder, of Findlay, being a Republican. Judge Hurin, the retiring member of the bench and the presiding judge, during his six years on the circuit bench, has gained a statewide reputation for sound judgment and the possession of a well-balanced judicial mind. He is held in the highest esteem in all of the sixteen counties of the Third judicial circuit. He was among the judges considered by President Taft for the vacancy created by the death of Federal Judge Robert W. Tayler, of Cleveland.

Phil M. Crow is one of the best-known lawyers in this part of Ohio, and his friends declare he will make an excellent judge. He has had a long legal training. He is popular in Marion.

During the present term of the circuit court in Marion, profound regret was expressed on all sides because of the early retirement of Judge Hurin, whose decisions were always regarded as eminently fair.

The following resolutions on the death of the late William H. Moore have been adopted by the members of the Powell Sunday-school class of Epworth M. E. church:

Resolved: That we, the members of the Powell Sunday-school class, are called upon to bow our heads in humble submission to the will of Almighty God in calling from our midst and fellowship our beloved brother in Christ and classmate, William H. Moore, who was the oldest and one of the charter members of the class We will ever cherish his kind and loving disposition and it behooves us as Christian men and women to emulate as far as possible his daily walk, for in him we could see the Christ spirit. We can not bring this memoir to a close without using the language of the psalmist, "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright for the end of that man is peace." We sincerely believe that our loss is his eternal gain and our hearts say within us, let our last days be like his. We express our heartfelt sympathy to Mrs Moore and family in their time of sorrow and affliction

Joseph Voll, merchant tailor, 100 N State street, Marion, Ohio, says: "Since I publicly told of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills in October, 1899, other members of my family have taken this remedy and have been greatly benefited. I suffered from pain in my loins and my back became so sensitive that to straighten after stooping, was a difficult operation There was also a dull, heavy pain in the back of my head and my kidneys caused me a great deal of annoyance. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Schmidt & Co's Drug Store, brought me prompt relief, and after continuing their use a short time, I was cured. I am in a position to vouch for the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills and I recommend them highly to anyone troubled by his back or kidneys."

TEXAS WOMAN KILLS ANOTHER

Tragedy Occurs in Ft. Worth Store.

MYSTERY MARKS SHOOTING AFFRAY

Clerks and Customers See the Woman Slain.

Lawyer's Wife Walks into Crowded Store—Asks for a Saleswoman and When She Appears Is Riddled with Bullets—Murderess Gives Herself Up, but Will Not Discuss the Shooting.

Fort Worth Texas, Jan. 7—Shooting with coolness and skill, Mrs. T. Brooks, wife of a prominent attorney of this city, fired five bullets into the body of Mrs Mary Binford in a crowded department store yesterday afternoon Each shot found its mark and Mrs Binford died almost instantly

Walking into the store Mrs. Brooks pleasantly spoke to persons she knew on the first floor, and proceeded to the second where Mrs. Binford was employed as saleswoman

As she stepped from the elevator she asked for Mrs. Binford, and, as the latter approached Mrs. Brooks drew an old-fashioned revolver from her muff

The women grappled, and in the scuffle the weapon was discharged, the ball passing through the hand of Mrs Binford. Freeing herself Mrs Brooks stepped back and deliberately took aim and fired four times.

Woman Is Sorry.

Astonished men and women rushed for exits, trampling over one another in the narrow aisles and screaming. Mrs Brooks, apparently cool, sent four bullets into the head of her adversary.

As the limp form of Mrs. Binford was crumpling to the floor Mrs. Brooks fired the last time, the ball entering behind the ear and coming out at the top of the head.

Mrs Brooks placed the pistol back into her muff and walked out of the store unmolested. She made her way on foot two blocks to her husband's office, handed him the pistol and, without explanation, said "I'm sorry," and fainted.

Neither she nor her husband would make a statement

Mrs Brooks waived preliminary trial and was released on bond of $10,000

Before obtaining a divorce from her husband two years ago Mrs. Binford was wealthy and popular. No cause for the killing is given out.

BURNING CHIMNEY CAUSES AN ALARM

Firemen Called to the C. H. Norris Home Tuesday.

The burning out of a chimney at the home of C. H. Norris, on east Church street, shortly after 10 o'clock a m Tuesday, caused smoke to come through the roof of the house and fill some of the living rooms An alarm of fire was sent in to the Central department and the firemen soon responded By tearing a hole in the roof, the source of the trouble was found. Practically no damage being done.

ELECTRICITY AS ILLUMINANT

Commercial Value Was Not Developed in This Country Until After the Centennial Exhibition of 1876.

The first experimental philosopher to discover that electric light could be produced by a dry battery was Sir Humphry Davy, who in 1810 exhibited a light three inches long, between carbon points, before the Royal Society of London. But no commercial value was attached to the use of electricity as an illuminant until more than half a generation later. The Centennial exhibition, held in Philadelphia in 1876, really marks the era of our present form of electric light, though electric lights had been in use abroad prior to that time The exhibition of models and practical demonstrations of electric lights at Philadelphia in 1876 attracted the attention of scientists and capitalists in this country, and the first incandescent lamps and the first arc system were put to practical use in a small way in 1876. The Brush arc light gained favor in the beginning as the most adaptable for street lighting, and Cleveland, O., the home of Charles Francis Brush, the inventor, was the initial American city to adopt the arc system for street lighting

Since 1878, both the Brush arc system and the Edison incandescent system have developed.—Morley's Magazine

CALLS NEW PARIS FASHIONS IMMORAL

To a certain extent clothes proclaim a woman's character, says Miss Rose Stahl, noted actress, qualifying a statement recently made by Miss Neale S. Knowles, of the Iowa State Agricultural College.

"As the fashions are today, a woman would have to design everything different from them for herself if she would not wear immoral clothes," says Miss Stahl. "The reason is plain enough. Fashions are not designed for good women. The makers of fashions have decided among themselves that good women may be all right in their way—but they don't know how to dress or wear clothes. That is the reason that every new fashion is designed originally for the demi-monde of Paris."

IN THE HOME OF PELICANS

Studying the Huge, Ungainly Birds at Close Range and Observing Their Method of Feeding Their Young.

The first time I ever saw a motley crowd of half-grown pelicans I thought nature had surely done her best to make something ugly and ridiculous It was a warm day, and the birds stood around with their mouths open, panting like a lot of dogs after a chase, their pouches shaking at every breath When I went near the youngsters went tottering off on their big webbed feet with wings dragging on this side and that as if they were poorly handled crutches. The youngsters huddled together by hundreds in a small place. Those on the outside pushed and climbed to get near the center, till it looked worse than any football scrimmage I ever saw.

In this wide area of low islands and water it was necessary, since we wanted to study the pelicans at close range, to adopt some method of hiding. We took a large wagon umbrella covered with a piece of green canvas, that hung down around the sides This we planted among the tules at the edge of a large colony, and covered the top well with reeds. The whole thing soon passed as part of the environment, while from the inside the camera man could point his camera out through a narrow slit in the canvas, take pictures and make observations at will.

One might wonder how such a huge billed bird as a pelican could feed a helpless chick just out of the egg. It was done with apparent ease. The old bird regurgitated a fishy soup into the front end of the pouch, and the baby pelican pitched right in and helped himself out of this family dish. As the young bird grew older, and larger, at each meal he kept reaching farther into the big pouch of his parent until finally, when he was half grown, it was a most remarkable sight. The mother opened her mouth, and the whole head and neck of her nestling disappeared down her capacious maw while he hunted for his dinner in the internal regions.—Collier's Monthly.

How to String Beads.

In stringing any precious beads, and pearls especially, never use a needle. Simply wax the end of the silk and pass it through the hole. The knotting is also an important point It must be large enough to hold the bead, but not large enough to show. Pearl stringers use an intricate knot of their own, and that is why it is, on the whole, better to have very expensive jewels strung by a professional. When there is a collarette or something of the sort to be made, this is absolutely necessary.

Dish That Pleased the Czar.

The czar of Russia is especially fond of fish and admires French cooking even more than Russian. When he visited Paris he praised highly the cuisine of France. The president inquired of his visitor which of the national dishes he liked best. "Cod cooked in olive oil!" was the czar's reply. "I should like to eat it twice a day."

Self-Sacrifice.

"You manage to keep your husband home at nights," said one woman "Yes," replied the other. "I am the only person of his acquaintance who will listen patiently and respectfully while he tells exactly how the election happened."

A DISTRESSING CASE IN PROBATE COURT

Application for a Guardian for a Babe.

FATHER IS SERVING TERM IN WORKHOUSE

Infant Is in Care of Little Sister While Mother Is Away at Work. Child Becomes Ill and Action Is Necessary—Seven Little Ones in Waddel Children's Home.

Application for a guardian for Bessie Lore, twenty-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lore, was made in probate court Tuesday morning. The babe has been under the care of her sixteen-year-old sister, the latter being taken seriously ill Monday evening and requiring medical attention.

The story of the Lore family is a touching one in a number of ways. Some time ago, John Lore was taken to the workhouse to serve a sentence and work out a fine on a charge of non-support of his minor children. After he had been taken to the workhouse seven small children were taken to the Waddel Children's home for care. The mother later accepted a position in a local hotel, but has not been spending much of the time at home, leaving the baby in charge of the sixteen-year-old sister, Nellie, while a grown-up boy worked and lived at home

When the eldest sister was taken sick, Monday evening, it was necessary to remove her to the home of a neighbor The mother was notified, but failed to visit her sick daughter. As a result of the circumstances of the family the twenty-months-old child will be taken to the Waddel Children's home with the seven other children, while the sixteen-year-old girl will probably be taken to the county infirmary.

THE PITY OF UNDERSTANDING

Ragged Tramp Was the Only One who Truly Sympathized With His Fellow of the Idle Class.

In the park a man was asleep on one of the settees His face was upturned to the sun His hat, which he had evidently placed over his eyes to protect them from the glare, had fallen off and rolled away in the dust.. Now and then a passer looked at him, some curiously, some with amusement, some with scorn, some with indifference "Let him sleep," they seemed to say "Pretty soon a policeman will come along and wake him up by pounding the lazy fellow on the soles of his shoes and sending him off to sleep somewhere else." In a workaday world there is little sympathy for the idle.

Some seats distant sat another man of the same stamp. His own ragged feet were stuck out in front of him, and he contemplated them steadily, as if he wondered a little at the wreck of his own life to which they had conducted him His hands were deep in his pockets, and his battered hat inclined well over his nose to protect his eyes from the sunshine Presently he grew weary of sitting, and rose unsteadily, as if wondering where to sit next. Then he advanced along the path toward the sleeper.

The hat lying in the dust caught his attention He stopped and looked at it, and touched it absent mindedly with one foot Then he looked at the sleeper

He seemed neither amused, nor scornful, nor curious. He picked up the battered hat carefully and dusted it with the sleeve of his coat Then he approached the sleeper, placed the hat over his face and shambled off along the path, and he did it all with infinite precaution, so as not to awaken the sleeper.—Youth's Companion.

THE RAISING OF NUTS IS URGED FOR STATE

Ohio Has Many Possibilities in This Line.

GOVERNMENT EXPERTS DISCUSS THE SUBJECT

At Columbus Meeting of Ohio State Horticultural Society Wooster Man Says Market for Nuts in State Is Good—Tells What Variety To Raise—His Opinions.

Ohio has undeveloped possibilities as a nut-growing state, according to H. A. Gossard of the agricultural experiment station at Wooster, who spoke at a recent session of the Ohio State Horticultural society at the Southern hotel at Columbus, though little has been done toward the commercial raising of nuts in the past and no attempts have been made to improve the native varieties.

"The market in the state is unexcelled," Gossard said. "The use of nuts has become general, yet comparatively few native trees remain."

The pecan, especially the variety native to the Wabash lands of Indiana, the English, Persian and Japanese walnut and the English filberts should thrive in Ohio's climate, according to Gossard, and the questions arising from nut-raising are being investigated now at the experiment station.

G. B. Brackett and W. R. Beattie of the United States department of agriculture at Washington also spoke. Brackett spoke on "Progressive Agriculture," and Mr Beattie on the vegetable work in the department

Better methods in orcharding, the use of better appliances, more attention to pruning, more frequent cultivation and wider use of sod mulching were advocated by Professor V. H Davis of Ohio State university. An interesting account of the rejuvenation of old orchards in Washington county, which was the largest apple-growing county in the state twenty-five years ago, but in which orchards were allowed to die out, was given by Charles W. Oakes, of Armenia, who told of the results following the application of modern methods.

Professor W. W Paddock of Ohio State university also urged the use of artificial heat in the orchards in the early spring to offset the danger of loss from frost Such heaters were used satisfactorily in the Vergon orchard, near Delaware, last year, and in other parts of the state

Spraying with the lime-sulphur chemical solution was asserted by N E Shaw of the state department of nursery and orchard inspection to be the best means of stopping the prevalence and increased area of the San Jose scale, which he said was the greatest enemy of Ohio's orchards

The use of a salt solution to kill poison ivy and other weeds was said to be possible by A. D. Selby of the Wooster experiment station during his review of the investigations into the control of plant diseases at the station last year. A solution of three pounds of salt to a gallon of water would do the work, he said.

"Prevention of leaf scorching is largely a question of water conservation," he said, and suggested that drain tiles be set on edge underneath trees would help trees to retain sufficient water.

The protection of all birds, save the English sparrow, as the destroyers of injurious insects and the preservers of the balance of nature, was urged by Scott G. Harry, also of the experiment station

"If the bird life of the world were destroyed, all other life would die out in eight years because of the ravages of insects," he said.

When She "Primps."

She walks in beauty like the night, as some romantic singer said; her eyes give forth a starry light, her lips are of a cherry red; across the floor she seems to float; she seems to me beyond compare a being perfect—till I note the way she has done up her hair. She must have toiled through half a day to build that large, unwieldy mass; she must have used a bale of hay, and strips of tin, and wire of brass; her sisters must have helped to braid, her mother wrought and tinkered there and butler, cook and chambermaid all helped to wrestle with her hair And after all the grinding toil and all the braiding and the fuss, the one effect is just to spoil her beauty and make other people cuss. She walks in beauty like the night where nights are most serenely fair; but, Julius Caesar! she's a sight, when she's got on her Sunday hair!

Who Knows?

A boy in a Chicago school refused to sew, evidently considering it beneath the dignity of a ten-year-old man. "George Washington sewed," said the principal, taking it for granted that a soldier must, "and do you consider yourself better than George Washington?" "I don't know, time will tell," said he, serenely.—Popular Education

OBJECT TO FORTS AND BIG NAVIES.

Speaking before the New York Peace Society, recently, Congressman David J. Foster, chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, declared that the proposed fortification of the Panama Canal, as urged by President Taft, would not only be unnecessary, but would be a criminal expenditure of the people's money. He said that within a decade it will be possible for an enemy to drop explosives from airships and thus destroy the fortifications. Chairman Tawney, of the House Committee on Appropriations, said that great armaments, and particularly great navies are a temptation towards war.

HANDED DOWN FROM EVE

Dread of Snakes Is Almost Universal and Must Date Back to the Cradle of the Race.

Not for five and probably not for 10,000 years has any ancestor of ours lived in a country or zone which was inhabited by a single dangerous, venemous serpent or a snake of any kind big enough to kill a jack-rabbit, yet the dread of serpents is as vivid as it was in the days of the Garden of Eden, says Dr. Woods Hutchinson, in an article on the dread of cats, snakes and mice in Success Magazine. Their baleful, unwinking eyes, their strangling coils, the ghastly sinuousness of their movements, the noiselessness of their approach, the agony and deadliness of their sting, throb and echo like a Wagnerian leit-motif through all literature and legend; are bitten and branded into our deepest consciousness as if by fire. An imitation of their hiss has become the expression of our deepest contempt and loathing. A hiss is understood in every language under heaven, and every three-year-old, to express derision and dislike, thrusts out his little pink tongue and with it imitates the flickering movements of the serpent's tongue.

The aversion to snakes has no appreciable present utility, for the risk of any modern American or European being killed by snake-bite, even in the most rattlesnake-infested and prohibition-ridden community, is about one-thirty-fifth that of death by lightning stroke. It must date back to at least the cradle of the race in the tropics, but even here its distribution is a singular one Of all animals above the size of a squirrel, one two display it in any vivid or paralyzing form. It is an echo of the days when our common ancestor, "tailed, covered with hair and probably arboreal in its habits," swung and rollicked in the tree tops.

Ingenious Explanation.

Critic—Why do you say in that story of yours that "Henderson's heart beat a tattoo as Mabel entered the room," Scribley? Do you wish your readers to believe that your hero carried a drum where he should have had a heart?

Scribbley—Not at all, my dear fellow. I used that expression advisedly I meant my readers to infer that as Mabel entered the room Henderson's heart sounded a call to arms.—Harper's Weekly.

DISTURBERS AND DEMAGOGUES HIT

Frank Black's Speech Pleases the Gotham Bankers.

MORGAN LEADS IN LOUD APPLAUSE

As Former Governor Raps Hard at Muckrakers.

Black Says It's Business of Men of Sense To Quit Whispering in Private and Come Out and Reason with People—Says Whole Country, Including Bankers, Must Change Tactics.

New York, Jan 17.—Financial circles are today discussing with considerable elation the speech of former Governor Frank S. Black before the city bankers in which he grilled the man he once nominated for president, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. The occasion was what the bankers termed "a dinner to the constitution of the United States." Bound volumes of that venerable document were distributed as souvenirs.

The Black speech included enthusiastic praise for Speaker Cannon and bitter criticism of "muckrakers and demagogues" and the ensuing applause was led by J. P. Morgan.

The fact that Black, after assailing the initiative and referendum, the recall, popular election of United States senators, and most of the other doctrines advocated by the progressives in the two old parties, was applauded at length, and that the speaker afterward was warmly congratulated by Morgan and the other big financiers present was declared, today, to indicate that the monied interests of the country will oppose any extension of these policies wherever possible, but especially in the East.

"It is the business of men of sense," said Black, "to quit whispering in private when demagogues and disturbers are busy and to come out and reason with the people.

Morgan Applauds.

"I believe that generations from now, when the names of sporadic and voluble reformers are preserved only because they fought him, the name of Speaker Cannon will be remembered with increasing respect. The whole country, including you bankers, must change tactics. The muckraker and the demagogue have done harm enough and ought to be sent to the rear. Their message of distrust and turbulence is neither sincere nor true. The vast majority of American business is honestly done and the vast majority of American fortunes honestly acquired."

The glasses on the guests' table rattled as the Morgan fist thumped the mahogany to indicate his approval.

"The vast majority of laboring men are getting what they earn," continued Black. "Twenty-five years ago the majority of those in this room were not getting as much as the bricklayer gets today. The disturber has ridden for years at the public cost at the head of a continuous and noisy parade. Why not let him walk a while while the business man catches up? We have been too long excited and misled by counterfeits. The time has come to act. The retirement of many of our best statesmen is foreshadowed, and they are to be replaced by the promotion of men whose statesmanship never has reached above the level of the initiative, referendum and recall, the popular election of senators and pensions for those out of work."

The Open Mind in Travel.

To leave oneself behind is perhaps the first and best initiation for travel, says Harper's Bazaar. As one steps on the train or goes up the gangplank, one says farewell to that wearing and aggravating personality who has lived so close to us for months, demanding, exacting, questioning, exhausting us with anxieties and brooding troubles. It requires no entire essay of Montaigne's to prove to us how "that the spirit often hindereth itself." Fresh fields and pastures new, a head and the hour to throw aside the old and put the best foot foremost brings a new heart as readily as conversion. Care is shifted from the shoulders; the back is turned upon teasing, reiterated obligations, and adventures and strangeness, so exhilarating after a long siege of the accustomed round, are ahead. Montaigne says that some one reported to Socrates that a certain man was in no wise improved by his travels, and he replied: "I can well believe it since he took himself along."

Smoothing Out the Past.

Mr. Railing—What! Your Dorcas society is going to give an oyster supper next week? Why, it was only last month that the chicken and waffle supper came off.

Mrs Railing—I know, Charles, but it's necessary for us to give the oyster supper, we'll have to make some money to pay the chicken and waffle supper deficit.

Worth Trying.

"If a man can't depend on his friends, whom can he depend on?" "He might try himself for a change."

WEBSTER IS AFTER WHITE SLAVERS

He Causes Arrests in Cleveland and Toledo.

Prosecutor H. C. Webster, of Toledo, a son of Rev. L. C. Webster and a brother of Mrs Simon E. Dewolfe, of this city, is making war on the white slave traffic and is figuring prominently in the arrest of persons who are charged with operating in Toledo and Cleveland.

The prosecutor has not only caused the arrest of a number of people, but has called the federal authorities to his assistance to suppress the traffic.

Prosecutor Webster asserts that the Forest City is the center of the white slave traffic in this part of the country, but Toledo is contributing largely. The arrests made are based on the statements of girls found in a bondage from which they found it hard to escape.

MRS. CHARLES RUTH SEEKS DIVORCE DECREE

Husband Is Rich, but Neglects Her.

HE REFUSES HER THE ATTENTION SHE NEEDS

Declines To Provide the Commonest Necessities of Life—Mrs. Ruth Is Member of a Prominent Family in Cleveland—Her Married Life Is Very Tempestuous.

Alleging that her husband, Charles Ruth, has been niggardly miserly and mean toward her, although he has property of the reasonable value of $25,000, Ida L. Ruth, a bride of less than a year, through Attorney L. E. Myers, brought an action for a divorce, Tuesday afternoon. She asks restoration to her maiden name of Matthews, reasonable alimony and that he be enjoined from selling, disposing or encumbering his property.

The Ruths were married at the plaintiff's home in Cleveland, April 6, 1910. She avers that ever since then she has conducted herself as a loving, faithful and obedient wife, performing all household and other duties incumbent upon her, insofar as he has permitted her to do so, with prudence and propriety, but "not so with the said Charles Ruth, who, by the terms and obligations of said marriage contract, was bound to treat her fairly, provide for, defend, protect and love her above all others."

According to the plaintiff, Ruth represented himself as a Christian gentleman at the time of their marriage, but within a week afterward he manifested a dislike for her and began a systematic crusade against her as his wife, finding fault with almost everything she did. He charged her with a lack of capacity in every way as his wife and, for the most trivial causes, called her "the most unmanly, outrageous and opprobrious language almost constantly during their entire married life."

When she was ill, the plaintiff further alleges, her husband refused her medical attention, saying she was not ill. He even declined to furnish her the commonest necessities of life, she avers, because he claimed she had earned nothing and he would give her nothing; cursed her when she entreated him to be kind to her, and finally ordered her to leave. Studiously he sought to crush her, she says, by denying her the management of the household and notifying merchants to extend no credit to her.

The property, which the plaintiff asks that the defendant be restrained from disposing of or encumbering, according to the petition, is as follows:

A farm of eighty acres lying west of Marion, for which the defendant has refused $12,000; a house and two lots in Park boulevard, worth more than $3,000; a third interest in four and one-half acres on Bennett street, worth $3,500; a third interest in a house and lot on west Center street, worth $2,000; a half interest in the business of L. Ruth & Company, fruit dealers, worth $2,000; money on deposit amounting to $2,000 and notes due him in February, aggregating $300, and other property which he inherited or was devised to him by the will of his father, John Ruth. Probate Judge W. S. Spencer issued a temporary restraining order.

The plaintiff is of a prominent Cleveland family, a brother, F. R. Matthews being one of the commissioners of Cuyahoga county.

ACTION DEFERRED BY PROBATE JUDGE

Matter of Appointing Guardian for Child.

Action on the application for the appointment of Humane Officer J. W. Ulsh as guardian of one-year-old Bessie Lore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lore, was deferred by Probate Judge W. S. Spencer for a period of two weeks, Tuesday afternoon. Meanwhile an effort will be made to obtain the release of Lore, the father, from the Columbus workhouse, where he was sent for failing to provide for his family of nine children.

Since Lore was committed to the workhouse, it has been learned that he has not been altogether to blame, the mother showing a heartless disregard, the humane authorities declare, for the children. Lore says he will go to work and support the children if he is released from the workhouse. Seven of the children were sent to the Waddel Children's home, and Bessie, the baby, was kept by the oldest girl, Nellie, aged sixteen years, until the latter became ill. The mother is employed at a local hotel, but showed little concern when informed of her daughter's condition.

Pending action of the court the girl will be taken care of at the county infirmary and the babe is with its mother.

Mr. Van Winkle, rector of St. Paul's Elling Memorial church.

Mr. Fies is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Fies, of south Prospect street, and has many friends here. About February 1, Mr. Fies will bring his bride to this city.

CHILDREN DRIVEN FROM THEIR BEDS

Susquehanna Valley's Orphan Home Destroyed by Fire.

Binghamton, N. Y., Jan. 18.—With the mercury below the zero mark, 200 children, inmates of the Susquehanna Valley's orphan home, were driven from their beds by fire that destroyed the home early today. There was a panic among the inmates because of the rapidity with which the flames spread. Several children were reported missing, but later all of them were accounted for.

Nine children were carried unconscious from the burning structure, having been overcome by smoke, but all will recover.

Medicine should never be left in sight of the invalid in the sick room.

SIFRITT LOCKED IN A REFRIGERATOR CAR

Unpleasant Season Passed by a Commercial Traveler.

INSPECTING THE CAR WHEN DOOR IS CLOSED

Mr. Sifritt Has an Old Hatchet With Which He Tries To Chop His Way to Liberty—Is Finally Released by a Passing Trainman—Thankful for His Deliverance.

J. E. Sifritt, a commercial traveler, residing on Orchard street, had a terrifying experience in a refrigerator car at Bellefontaine, Tuesday. He was locked up from eleven o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon and when found was trying to chop his way to liberty with an old hatchet which he had taken with him into the car to open some orange crates.

Mr. Sifritt went to Bellefontaine to inspect a carload of oranges. While he was in the car a switch engine bumped into one end of it and jammed the door shut. A short time afterward a switchman came along on the other side of the car and closed the door, bolting it. Sifritt tried to get out, but was unable to move either one of the doors. He yelled for help, but the noise of the yard traffic drowned his cries. Seizing the hatchet which he had brought into the car with him Sifritt began to cut his way out. At about 4 o'clock in the afternoon an employe of the Big Four went into the yards to seal the car for the night and heard Sifritt chopping. He opened the door and released the frightened prisoner. Sifritt was profuse in his thanks to the Big Four employe, who, he said, had probably saved his life.

"It was the most horrible experience I ever had," declared Sifritt. "The car was freezing cold."

OBITUARY.

Haines—Mrs. Mary M. Haines, youngest child of Frank J. and Caroline Meyer, was born in Canton, Stark county, August 1, 1846. She was the last surviving member of a family of five children; her parents also having preceded her in death. September 24, 1864 she was married to Monroe W. Haines, who died February 24, 1910. The greater part of their married life was spent in Marion; but about eight years ago, they removed to Washington, D. C., where the family have since made their home. Mrs. Haines was devoted to her family and her home. She was fond of music, and all the fine accomplishments which count for so much in the making of perfect womanhood. She was a member of the Episcopal church, and whenever her health permitted, she was a regular attendant. In an accident six years ago, she sustained a fracture of the hip. Being naturally delicate, she never recovered from the effects of this injury. Although she had failed steadily since that time, her death came unexpectedly. She fell asleep on the morning of January 13, 1911. Her only daughter Miss Carolyn E., is left to mourn, as well as numerous friends in this city, Washington, and her girlhood home of Canton.

EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS WANTED

New York World Says American People Demand It.

New York, Jan. 18.—That an extra session of congress to revise the tariff so that duties may be taken off food stuffs is demanded by the American people, is the assertion of the World today. It sent letters broadcast to people of all political faiths asking whether they favor the calling of an extra session for this purpose, and the vast majority of the answers are in the affirmative. The present tariff board, according to the World, will not be ready to report for months.

The canvass shows that Democratic and independent daily papers favor the extra session and revision, two to one; that twenty per cent. of the Republican papers favor it; that politicians of both parties favor it by a large majority, while commercial bodies and chambers of commerce generally are evenly divided.

Twenty-year-old David Temple, residing two miles north of Kenton, a self-confessed check worker, who is believed to have operated in Marion and Bellefontaine, was caught in the act of passing a bogus check at Bellefontaine Tuesday. He was promptly placed under arrest and confessed that he had passed a number of bad checks, each amounting to either $10.50 or $12.50.

Temple, a green farmhand, said that he had been in the habit of going to Bellefontaine in the mornings about twice a week and cashing his bogus checks. He said he would then catch a Big Four train for Marion and go to Kenton from this city. He denied that he had ever passed any bad checks here.

MAN HAS A NEW DIVORCE SUBSTITUTE

Father-in-Law Instead of Mother-in-Law Is Blamed.

New York, Jan. 18. The much maligned mother-in-law is having a brief respite in Justice Goff's court today. In her place is a brand new divorce substitute, to-wit: A father-in-law.

In defending himself against his wife's separation suit, David L. Herman, alleged to have an income of $18,000 a year, declares that his married life has been wrecked by his wife's devotion to her father and that to be with her father, she deserted her own home. Justice Goff was so impressed with Herman's tale of marital woes that he denied the wife's application for $750 a month alimony pending the trial of her suit.

HORSE IS PRIDE OF THE CAVALRY BANDS

Bears Kettle Drums, Is Handsome and Dignified.

In certain armies of the world there are grades of honor among the horses, as well as among the men. The proudest and most dignified of all the horses of the army is the animal that fills the position of drum horse in the regimental band. In some armies cavalry bands are mounted, and the most honorable position in all the band is that of the bearer of the kettle drums. The horse is selected for his distinguished appearance. He is often piebald, although sometimes pure white, but whatever his color his appearance must be consistent with the conspicuous position he has to fill.

Something more than mere beauty of form is required of the drum horse. He must be trained until he becomes a dignified and graceful bearer of the trappings that pertain to his high calling. His education is severe and prolonged, bringing him up to that point where his pride and intelligence make him equal to the duties required of him.

His nerves are severely tried by the booming of the large drums he carries, but in time he becomes as indifferent to their noise as war horses do to the singing bullets. In the parade his rider has his hands full in the use of the sticks. He controls the horse by means of reins fastened to the stirrup cup near the foot.—Harper's Weekly.

SIR ALGERNON WEST MUST PAY DAMAGES

Daughter-in-Law Gets a Verdict of $6,250 Today.

London, Jan. 18.—Charging her father-in-law, Sir Algernon West, with slander, for having said that her extravagance was responsible for the separation from her husband, Mrs. Horace West, today, got a verdict of $6,250 damages against Sir Algernon.

Mrs. West alleged that these charges had caused her to be "cut" socially and her name to be stricken from the court list. Mrs. Herbert Asquith, wife of the premier, was one of the witnesses for the defendant. She testified that a reputation for being merely extravagant, was a passport to high society, rather than a bar.

Sir Algernon was at one time the favorite secretary of Gladstone.

OFFICERS SHOULD BE EXPERT ENGINEE

Copyright 1911 by the United Press Association

[By Richmond Pearson Hobson

We shall continue to have frequent accidents in our navy so long as we continue to lack a highly trained and highly [illegible] corps of engineers in my opinion

It is difficult to comment on accident as that on the Delaware yesterday in which eight men were killed by an explosion in the forward turret without knowing some hundred circumstances and the precise cause But I can not but associate them with the decline in engineering efficiency which I think began to take place since 1899 In that year the engineer corps and the line officers were merged Since then in my opinion the navy has been the victim of

This loss has been offset somewhat by the development of the warrant officers into trained mechanics However it is not to be expected that when a naval officer [illegible] duties and abilities spread over the whole field of naval activity he is going to attain the best results in any one branch

Should Be Experts

I do not wish to criticize the personnel in the least The American naval officer as a commander and an all round fighting officer is the highest type But I maintain none of them are as expert engineers as they should be

I would like to see the establishment of a technical corps the sole purpose of which would be to develop a highly skilled force A corps of specialists in other words should be created which should give their attention to the engineering problems of the navy Once in this corps a man should stay in and be expected to know only enough of seamanship to enable him to work in harmony with the sea going division of the service

I believe Secretary of the Navy Meyer is doing the best he can under the laws which are in force However in my opinion we shall continue to have these distressing accidents just so long as the present system is permitted to prevail

HEAVY COLLECTION IS MADE BY TREASURER

Small Taxpayers Are Prompt in Meeting Taxes

HEAVIER HOLDERS ARE NOT SO PROMPT

The Treasurer Is Anxious To Have the Taxes Collected by January 25 Owing to the Large Amount of Work Which Must Be Taken Care of After the Collections

Taxes amounting to $190,612 9 have been collected by County Treasurer W C Wottring up to the present time The total amount to be collected for the half year is about $12 000

It has always been customary for County Treasurer Wottring to close his books January 2 and assess the penalty thereafter Under a ruling of the attorney general it is held that the books must be kept open until the day of the delinquent tax sale which is February 14 this year However there is nothing said in the attorney generals ruling about the power of county treasurers to assess the penalty after that date

While Treasurer Wottring has never said that he would assess or attempt to assess the penalty after January 2 he is exceedingly anxious that all taxpayers pay their taxes by that date because of the great amount of work that is necessary to be done after that time

Practically all of the small taxpayers have paid but many of the heavy taxpayers have not yet come in They usually wait until the last day A number of corporations have not paid but they will be in before the flag falls January 25

Indications are that the full amount of the half tax will be paid before next Wednesday

Charles Ruth Files an Answer and Cross Petition

SAYS WIFE ASSAILS CHARACTER CRUELLY

Strikes Him When He Denies Charge of Being Untrue—Seeks To Extort Money from Him and Deserts Him Wholly Without Cause Notes of Common Pleas Court

In the divorce matter of Ida L Ruth against Charles Ruth the defendant through Attorneys Mouser & Moloney filed his answer and cross petition in the common pleas court Thursday He admits that he is the owner of all the property described in the plaintiffs petition except that he is the owner of only one lot on Lark boulevard and not two as alleged He denies each and every other allegation and in his cross petition declare that since his marriage to the plaintiff in October last April 6 1910 he has conducted himself as a true and faithful husband that the plaintiff on the contrary has violated her marital obligations and has been guilty of extreme cruelty and gross neglect in that less than a month after they were married she began to assail his character and to charge him with the most unseemly conduct without any reason for so doing He avers that she became insanely jealous and made his life most unhappy by reason of unwarranted conduct and at the same time destroyed her own pleasure and happiness

June 1910 after the plaintiff and defendant had returned to their home the defendant alleges she began to accuse him of being untrue to her and worked herself into such a frenzy that she violently struck defendant He says he endeavored to pacify her and to persuade her that her charge were groundless but that his kindness and acts in that regard only seemed to increase her the more

The defendant declares that after abusing and mistreating him and indulging in unwarranted fits of jealousy his wife demanded that he pay her the sum of $ 000 promising that if that amount she would leave him in peace He further says that in July she again struck him and again demanded that he pay her the sum of $ 000 He denies that he ever used any vile or profane language toward her and that she deserted him January 17 without provocation reason or excuse after failing to carry out her design of obtaining a part of his property He asks that the plaintiffs petition be dismissed that he may be decreed a divorce and that upon final hearing she be forever barred from all interests of any kind in his property

LITTLE ONES DRIVEN INTO NIGHT BY FIRE

Two Are Shoeless and Two in Nighties and Barefoot

HOME OF MARION AULT IS TOTALLY DESTROYED

Mr and Mrs Ault Are at Church When Their Home Takes Fire Eldest Child Discovers Blaze and Rescues the Others—Loss Is Covered by Insurance

Through the bravery of twelve year old Clara Shuey a daughter of Mrs Marion Ault by a former marriage the three youngest children of Mr and Mr Ault residing twelve miles southeast of Marion were saved from a terrible death Wednesday evening when the Ault home was destroyed by fire

In the early evening Mr and Mrs Ault and the other members of the family had gone to services at the East Canaan church three quarters of a mile away leaving the four younger children at home Shortly after the parents left the two older children aged twelve and ten years had put the younger children one aged four and a baby aged two to bed and then they laid down on a couch partly dressed to await their parents return The eldest girl not feeling very well had only fallen in a doze when she was awakened about 9 o'clock by the noise of the fire The frightened child realizing the peril of those who had been left in her charge hurriedly awakened the other children and clad only in their night clothes the two older girls who were partly dressed with the exception of their shoes took the babes and started for the church to give the alarm When about half way to the church the little tots met their parents and others returning from the meeting Their story was quickly told and while Mr and Mrs Ault and others rushed on to the scene of the conflagration a kind neighbor took the frightened and shivering children into the home of W H Miller who resides near the church where they were tenderly cared for

Before the children had left the home the fire had gained good headway and by the time the others arrived it had gotten beyond control Securing water from the pump the fire fighters succeeded in saving the summer kitchen but the house which was a large eight room structure was totally consumed

The winter meat which was in the summer kitchen was saved and a few pieces of furniture from the house were rescued but other than these all the contents were destroyed

It is thought that the fire started from sparks from the chimney The contents were insured as was also the building

The building was on the farm belonging to Rev Charles Kuhlman of Amanda and was rented by Mr Ault

PETITION GRANTED BY THE ELECTION BOARD

A Move Toward Erecting Two More School Buildings

AN ISSUE OF BONDS FOR $65,000 IS WANTED

Buildings Are So Badly Crowded that Some Children Are Unable To Attend School but Half the Proper Number of Hours—School Board Must Provide Room

A petition asking that an election for a school bond issue of $65 000 as granted by the Marion county board of election at a meeting in the Marion National Bank building Wednesday afternoon The election will be held Tuesday February 7 Friday and Saturday before the election an opportunity will be given electors to register at the board of election headquarters Registration at the various polling precincts of the city would cost $1 100 board of election officials say

Although two thirds of the voters must be in favor of the bond issue before it can carry under the law members of the board of education feel confident that the people will sanction the erection and need of two more school buildings

Where ordered this October but because and girls in the fourth grade and every room in school on half days on account of the poor condition of the children at that time but something has been done declared a committee of the board of education to present to the proposed bond issue Since then it has been the history of Marion of the year to four fold bond issues but not something that concerns every man woman and child more vitally We want to have plenty of room for our children Not buy land in the first great who say no school only half a day because the proper grades of high with and no are entitled to have the child in school all day

If the electors vote favorably proposed bond issue February then the board of education will have to erect building to accommodate the pupils for the ensuing year educated

Undue consumption of tea coffee cocoa and chocolate will make the skin sallow

EXTRA SESSION IS LIKELY NOW

Congress Has Many Measures To Pass Upon

IMPORTANT BILLS MAY BE DELAYED

On Account of Latest Fight on Rules

Outcome of Row Indicates That Another Session Is Probable and This Seems To Be the View of Leaders of the Body from Speaker Cannon Down—Fawney Advocates Pushing of Bills

Washington Jan 1 —The outcome of another row on the rules in the house of representatives indicates the probability of an extra session of congress At least this is the view of the leaders of the body from Speaker Cannon down

Representative Fawney of Minnesota chairman of the house appropriations committee was more communicative on the subject than those associated with him in the leadership of the house organization While he would not permit himself to be quoted he admitted that as a result of the performance of the house there was slight chance of the regular business of that body being concluded by March 4

What the house did amounted to the abolishment of a precedent that no general business may be considered no matter what a majority of the body shall desire on the first and third Mondays of the month These days must be given over to the consideration of bills called up for passage by unanimous consent or that proposed for passage under suspension of the rules and of motions of the discharge of committees from the consideration of measures on which they have taken no action But as one man may destroy the operation of the unanimous consent order and as Representative Mann of Illinois by utilizing the absurdities of the committee discharge proposition has rendered it impossible to consider bills under suspension of the rules it is apparent that for a considerable portion of the legislative session the house is entirely tied up

JACKSON DAY IS OBSERVED

Democratic Stars Pour into Baltimore

CLARK HARMON AND BAILEY ARE THERE

Marshalled Under the Hickory Tree and Harp

Emblem That Adorns Political Flag of Andrew Jackson Seen on All Sides and Historic Rooster and Patient Mule Are for a Time Forgotten—Great Interest Manifest at the Meeting

Baltimore Md Jan 1.—Democrats were marshaled here today under the hickory tree and the harp the emblem that adorned the political flag of St Jackson For the day the historic rooster and the patient mule were forgotten

The national Democratic celebration of Jackson day has brought to Baltimore more distinguished members of the party than have assembled on any one occasion except at national conventions A large number came in last night but the stars arrived today The latter included Champ Clark speaker to be of the house of representatives Governor Harmon of Ohio and Senator J W Bailey of Texas who spread the light of Democracy up to date at a great mass meeting

While every assurance had been given that there were no practical politics in the celebration and none likely to develop talk in the hotel corridors included discussion of the question Is it loaded? which referred not so much to suspicion of a boom planned in advance but to the danger of a spontaneous outbreak by the crowd

Galaxy of Leaders

Governor Harmon of Ohio and Governor Wilson of New Jersey were most talked of when the conversation turned to the presidency There was general regret that Wilson was unable to come the sight of the two governors on the same stage and each giving his version of Democracy having been anticipated as a rare treat

There was much interest before the meeting in Governor Harmon The fact that he had twice carried Ohio seemed to have made him an impressive figure with many of the visitors His speech was awaited with the keenest interest because it would develop whether there was any basis for the report that a Harmon boom was to be a feature of the celebration

In the galaxy of Democratic leaders a familiar smile and a winning voice are lacking, for the sage of Fairview is in absentia Member Bryan was cordially invited to come to the jubilee but he declined to accept

The program for the day called for a silent mass meeting in Lyric auditorium and a banquet in the evening at the Fifth regiment armory

A large crowd attended the meeting in Lyric hall Governor A Leo Crothers of Maryland presided and addresses were delivered by Governor Harmon Champ Clark and Senator Bailey

ECONOMY IN HIGH PRICES

Well Dressed Man Explains How He Buys Expensive Clothes and Wears Them Many Years

Two well dressed men at least they were so far as one not thoroughly expert in what good clothes are could judge were talking about the cost of them

I paid $80 for this suit said the elder man and—

Gee whiz interrupted the younger that's too much for me to pay for one suit of clothes Why I gave only $15 for this suit I have on

A very nice looking suit too admitted he other

It was marked down from $90 the younger confessed as though desirous of apologizing for wearing a $15 hand me down As far as I can see he went on with some degree of self gratulation yours doesn't look to be $60 better

How long have you worn yours? inquired the older

This is the second year Two years is as long as I wear a suit

And this is the eleventh year I've had mine Of course I haven't worn it every day and I have had the tailor keep in good condition as you see though this is the last year of its life so your $15 suit at $7 50 a year is about as extravagant as my $80 suit at $7 30 a year isn't it? Besides I've been wearing an $80 suit from the best tailor in town while you are wearing the $15 hand me down picked up wherever you happened to see the reduction sale I practise economy in all things and for that reason I wear the best clothes I can buy and look like a millionaire if I'm not one

Texan Automobile Railroad

Texas used to claim the distinction of having the first automobile railroad Five cars used to make regular trips on a three hour schedule over the 45 miles between Lufkin and Hyde counties The line had a private right of way fenced off as for a railway and the roadbed was worked by section hands to this extent—it was kept scooped free of sand The drivers (this in the sense in which the Englishman uses the word) were cowboys in blue overalls and large felt hats They were required to make the 45 miles in the hours because the line carried United States mail and was under contract to keep schedule Often ten cars would clip an hour off that for good measure The round trip rate for 90 miles was $10

MARION'S BIG GAIN SUBJECT OF COMMENT

An Increase of 53.7 Per Cent. in the Past Decade.

GROWTH IS REGARDED AS VERY REMARKABLE

Findlay and Galion Suffer Loss in Population—But Few Cities Having Population in Excess of 5,000 Lose in Numbers—Many Show a Very Fine Increase.

Marion's population of 18,232, as announced by the census bureau and published in Saturday's Star, was the subject of considerable comment throughout the city. When it is taken into consideration that its increase of 53.7 per cent. in the decade is fifth in the cities having a population between 10,000 and 25,000, the growth is more remarkable than one would first suppose.

For example, Findlay in Hancock county fell off in population during the past ten years. In 1900 it had a population of 17,613, while the census for 1910 gives it a population of 14,825. Galion also suffered a loss, due, probably, to the fact that so many railroad men have moved to Marion within the past few years. Galion's population in 1900 was 7,282 and the census in 1910 gives it as 7,214, thus a slight falling off is shown.

All of the eighty-two cities in Ohio, with a population in excess of 5,000, the only cities which showed decreases in population, in addition to Findlay and Galion, were Defiance, Circleville, Marrietta and Newburg.

The increases in the cities having a population between 10,000 and 25,000 were:

Norwood, 149.7 per cent; Elyria, 68.6; Alliance, 68.0; Steubenville, 58.0; Marion, 53.7; Lancaster, 45.6; Middletown, 42.7; Ashtabula, 41.0; Cambridge, 37.4; Portsmouth, 31.3; Bellair, 30.6; Warren, 29.9; East Liverpool, 23.6; Mansfield, 17.7; Massillon, 16.2; Chillicothe, 11.8; Ironton, 10.7; Piqua, 9.9; Tiffin, 8.1; Sandusky, 1.6.

PROSSER BURCKHARDT DIES VERY SUDDENLY

His Death Is the Result of a Stroke of Apoplexy.

Prosser J. Burckhardt, a nephew of Mrs. Isabelle Norris, of this city, and well known here, suffered a stroke of apoplexy while in an automobile enroute to his home in Cincinnati early Sunday morning. He died a short time later at the city hospital.

A week ago, Mr. Burckhardt, who frequently visited Marion, became suddenly ill while in the offices of Fred Salmar, above the Mecca cafe, Cincinnati, but he paid no attention to his illness.

Sunday morning, Burckhardt complained of feling sick, but decided to accompany a party of friends on an automobile ride. On their return and while on his way to his home on Mt. Auburn, Burckhardt suddenly fainted. A quick run was made to the hospital, where Dr. Howard soon pronounced him dead.

The deceased was a son of Leopold Burckhardt, a retired oil merchant. He leaves one brother, Harry Burkhardt, and a sister, Mrs. John M. Shaw, of Indianapolis, both of whom are well known here, and a half-brother, Leopold Burckhardt Jr.

OLDEST PASTOR OF MARION PRESBYTERY

Rev. Milton W. Brown Passes to Eternity.

MINISTER REACHES EXTREME OLD AGE

Occupies Pulpits of the Ostrander and Old Stone Churches Eight Years—Lacks Four Months of Being Ninety Years of Age—A Review of His Life as a Minister.

In regard to the passing of Rev. Milton W. Brown the Delaware Gazette, of Saturday, says:

"Rev. Milton W. Brown, former pastor of the Ostrander and Old Stone Presbyterian churches, and probably the oldest living minister of the Marion Presbytery, died at his home on north Liberty street, on Saturday morning about 2:15 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Brown suffered a stroke of apoplexy last Wednesday, since which time he has been unconscious, and his death was not unexpected. He lacked but four months of being ninety years of age.

Rev. Mr. Brown was born May 20, 1821, in Wayne county, on a farm adjoining the little village of Old Edenburg, now called Applecreek, and was the oldest in a family of thirteen children. The home in which he was raised was considered a fine mansion in its day. He and his sisters attended the district school where their father taught for many years during the winters, devoting the other months to the management of his farm. Early in his teens, during a severe illness, Milton made a vow to God that if He raised him up from his bed of sickness, he would devote his life to the work of the Master.

Upon his restoration to health he taught school in Kentucky and earned money to take him to what is now Washington and Jefferson college in Pennsylvania, where he graduated in June, 1848. He then taught in Ligonier academy for a number of terms, thereby earning money to take him to the theological seminary at Allegheny, Pennsylvania. He graduated from that institution in 1851, and was licensed to preach the same year by the Presbytery of Coshocton, later consolidated with the Presbytery of Wooster. The same year he began his work as pastor at Hopewell and Nashville where he remained for twelve years. Sickness then compelled him to give up his work.

It was during this pastorate that he married Miss Sarah Finney, a member of one of his congregations. In 1871, Mr. Brown became pastor of the Mt. Eaton church. In 1879, he removed with his family to Delaware and supplied the Ostrander church and the stone church for eight years.

Rev. Mr. Brown is survived by seven children, as follows:

ANSWERS ARE FILED BY COUNTY TREASURER

Matter of Collection of Liquor Tax from Local People.

TREASURER WANTS PETITIONS DISMISSED

January Term of Court Will Give the Judges Plenty of Business. The Docket Contains 309 Cases the Largest in the History of the County—But Few Divorce Cases.

Answers asking the dissolution of temporary injunctions, obtained by Charles Miller, Herman Kalkbrenner, Edward J. Burke, Charles Bausinger, John and James O'Keefe and George Ackerman, restraining the collection of the liquor tax in dry territory, were filed in the common pleas court by County Treasurer W. C. Wottring, through Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Justice, late Saturday afternoon.

On account of alleged trafficking in "spiritous, vinous, malt and other intoxicating liquors," the plaintiffs in the action were placed on the liquor duplicate in the following amounts:

Miller, $645.61, with penalty of $129.12; Kalkbrenner, $645.61, with penalty of $129.12; Burke, $645.61, with penalty of $129.12; John and James O'Keefe, $686.81, with penalty of $137.36; Bausinger, $648.35, with penalty of $129.67; Ackerman, $686.81, with penalty of $137.36.

The answering defendant also asks that the petitions of the plaintiffs be dismissed.

buy. Certainly the literary market

When the January term of the common pleas court is begun a week from Tuesday, the docket will be fairly running over with cases—309, which is the largest number in the history of the county.

Many of these have been carried over from term to term. During the October term, which closed January 2, only fifty-seven cases were heard and dismissed. The major part of these were actions in divorce, so that the new docket contains fewer divorce cases than any docket in years. Out of the 309 cases fifteen of them are for divorce.

Coming Tax Sale.

The delinquent tax sale to be held Tuesday, February 14, will be one of the lightest sales of its kind in many years. Assistants in the offices of the treasurer and the auditor are now preparing the list. Under a ruling of the attorney general general taxes can be paid up to the day of the delinquent sale, although by paying by January 25 matters will be greatly facilitated.

A bathing cap may be kept in good condition for another year by sprinkling it thickly inside and out with toilet powder before putting it away. It will prevent it sticking together and rotting.

TODAY'S FASHION HINT.

FURS ARE MASSIVE; FROCKS ARE FRAGILE.

The combination of heavy, luxurious furs with diaphanous gowns is strikingly effective. Over the dainty theater and restaurant gowns of the winter the carriage wrap is frequently only an arrangement of fur coming to the waist. Those big neckpieces are made of two or three animal skins, and the huge muff also is on this luxurious plan. The neckpiece and muff pictured are of black marten—or skunk—fur, and on the hat—a new model in the "sundown" shape—is also a band of the dark fur. The gown is of gray chiffon with a flame red satin hem and embroidery in gray, white and coral.

A TRAGEDY ON THE BIG FOUR

Entire Family Wiped Out by Flying Train

THE KNICKERBOCKER CRASHES INTO BUGGY

Mr and Mrs Clarence Bauer Are Instantly Killed

Little Son Is Found with Bodies Alone in the Night—Tongue Is Frozen and He Is Unable To Speak—Little Fellow Dies In a Short Time as Result of Exposure

Ghastly End of Railroad Men

Agosta Jan 18 [Special] An entire family was wiped out by a tragedy at the Main street crossing of the Big Four railroad here Tuesday night at 11 45 when east bound passenger No 18 known as the Knickerbocker crashed into a buggy occupied by Mr and Mrs Clarence Bauer and their three year old son Leonard

Mr and Mrs Bauer each of whom were twenty four years old were instantly killed Apparently the child was not injured but died three hours later from exposure His little hands and tongue were frozen He tried to speak and tell his rescuers about the fatal accident but was unable to utter but one word and that word sounded like Mama

The little boy had lain about twenty feet from the corpses of his mama and papa from 11 45 p m until 5 o clock in the morning when the crew of westbound freight train No 11 found him

Terrible Scene

The ghastly scene was flooded by bright moonlight The engineer of the freight brought his train to a sudden stop He hurried to the bodies of the man and woman lying in the ditch about twenty feet apart on the north side of the tracks The faint sound of a crying babe was heard as the other trainmen rushed forward

A hasty investigation was made and the tot was found about twenty feet north of the parents Engineer Gibson of Bellefont line gathered the child tenderly into his arms and as he looked down into the tiny face that shone pale in the moonlight a great lump came into his throat as the child tried to speak to him

The boy was taken to the nearby home of H D McClelland a Big Four section boss Dr I Culbertson was called but the child died within half an hour after the physician arrived He pronounced death due to the exposure from lying out in the cold so long

Returning from Social

Mr and Mrs Bauer were returning to their home three miles northeast of Agosta from an Epworth league social at the home of James Imhods south of here A coal shed obstructed their view of the Big Four tracks to the West as they drove to their death at the crossing

Husband and wife were hurled down into the ditch and are believed to have been instantly killed Their skulls were crushed and they were otherwise horribly injured How their little boy received injury only to die from exposure is a mystery

James Lynch of Cleveland engineer of the Knickerbocker evidently did not know that his monster engine had struck the little family as he did not report upon arriving in Marion

The horse driven by Bauer was uninjured With it broken harness it ran straight to the Bauer home It passed the home of C M Kenmer one of the Bauer neighbors who was at a social gathering was being held Some of the merrymakers noticed the horse and it was thought that the Bauers had suffered a runaway accident An investigation was started but the bodies and the child were found by the westbound trains crew who took the lad to Kenmer's where he was cared for

The Child Dies

After the child was taken to the Wickliffe home the bodies of Mr and Mrs Bauer were carried to the undertaking parlors of Marks where they were prepared for burial Funeral services will be held Sunday and interment will be in the Oak Grove cemetery

The Knickerbocker train was in charge of Conductor Dan Connors of Indianapolis with Engineer James Lynch of Cleveland at the throttle The conductor of the west bound freight train No 11 was Ed Thomas Engineer Gibson was in the cab with Fireman [illegible]

STATE WILL FACE DEFICIT

Unless Assembly Chops the Appropriations

AUDITOR URGES STRICT ECONOMY

Disbursements Are Digging Deep into Treasury

To Meet Appropriations of $17 740 207 73 Auditor Fullington Says He Can Only Squeeze $15 099 042 04 — He Seeks Money from All Sources of Revenue

Fullington's Estimates Given

Columbus O Jan 18 Unless the general assembly chops one third from the appropriations asked this session the state will face a deficit at the end of the fiscal year

State Auditor Fullington declared today that unless strictest economy is exercised in all state departments and institutions the state will soon be left without a dollar in its treasury

Departments and institutions have asked appropriations amounting to $9 14 000 for the remaining three quarters of the fiscal year There are already unpaid appropriations amounting to $4 958 478 44 All these are paid from the general revenue fund which with other disbursements brings the estimated disbursements from the fund to $17 997 809 73

Other estimated disbursements are from the sinking fund $ 21 000 for interest on the irreducible debt from the state common school fund $2 434 454 from the university fund $580 000 This total estimated disbursements at $17 740 263 73

To meet this Fullington from all sources can find a revenue of only $15 099 042 04

In arriving at this estimate the auditor has squeezed every dollar from every department institution and possible source of revenue

A Big Problem

The auditor bases his statement of a threatened deficit on the steadily diminishing balance in the treasury during the past three years On November 1 1909 it amounted to $5 190 81 1 on November 1 1909 $1 124 110 10 and on November 1 1910 this had dropped to $ 6 5 842 04

Authorities declare it dangerous for a state treasury balance to fall below $1 000 000 because a contingency might wipe this out The excise tax served to place the state on a firm financial basis which is now threatened by increased appropriations

Reasonable increase in disbursements is expected because a state's expenses increase with the growth of its institutions The revenues also increase especially from the excise tax on corporations

During the past three years the appropriations have been out of proportion with the increase in revenue with the result that the balance in the treasury at the end of the year will be wiped out unless a check is put on the appropriations or the revenue is increased

This problem of securing additional revenue is one of the most important faced by the present legislature

MANY DEMOCRATS DINE IN HARMONY

A California Man Announces Bryan's Retirement

Only Sign of Rupture at Baltimore Gathering To Discuss Plans for 1912 Campaign Occurs When Clark and Bailey Express Divergent Views on Methods of Tariff Revision—Harmon Talks

Baltimore Jan 18 At the Democratic conference here a radical difference of opinion developed between Champ Clark speaker to be and Senator Bailey of Texas over the method to be pursued by the Democrats in revising the tariff Jan 6 Otherwise it was a perfectly proper harmony gathering

The nearest approach to the buzzing of the presidential bee was the taking of a poll on favorite candidates by a Baltimore newspaper This count was taken on the special train from Washington which brought about 300 representatives senators and other guests Judson Harmon led by a good sized margin with the favorite candidate and Woodrow Wilson came next Bryan and Governor Foss of Massachusetts got part a vote

Seven hundred plates were laid at the banquet and the diners included most of the notable Democratic members of the house of representatives and many senators in official life

Theodore M Bell of California William Jennings Bryan close friend declared that Mr Harmon would be president of the United States and that the Democratic party would not again be called upon to nominate him It was the only time that Bryan's name was mentioned in the days proceedings

The fact that Mr Bell took occasion first speaking of Bryan to sing the praises of Champ Clark led many to suspect that the people's leader is preparing to throw his support to the Missourian in the coming race for the Democratic nomination

Harmon Addresses Conference

In his speech at the conference preceding the banquet Governor Harmon said among other things The people have not decided to trust the Democratic party again after an unusually long interval and to intrust to it power chosen to act on its behalf to justify their confidence We can only do it by each one individually devoting his immediate talents to the public business with a single eye to the general good and by acting in cordial harmony to accomplish the common purpose Personal preferences jealousies and ambitions must not be allowed to spring up and breed confusion in counsel and action We are not on trial but a principle to be applied We must be faithful in the fulfilling our trust to us before we can hope to gain more or even to keep what we have

Turning to the tariff he said Our duties to that prediction of Jamieson we must expect and patiently endure There may be some temporary disturbance of business though I ought to be more greater than when special favors by means were abolished or the change made to specific payments And there is far more nonsense and similar to business than the assurance that nobody is to secure special advantage from any public source While with the tariff once placed on a sound basis the apprehension of the odium hovering with scarcities will forever be dispelled

For Election of Delegates on Separate Ballot

Former Senator Clevenger Jumps into Ring and Tells Legislators They Are Taking Long Chances Anti-Cigaret Bill Makes Appearance—Anti Saloon League Orators Ready for Talkfest

Columbus O Jan 18 The fight against the election on a non partisan ballot of delegates to the constitutional convent on has been started in the legislature A bill has been introduced in the senate by Senator Green providing for the election of these delegates on separate ballot and without party designation

Former Senator Frank Clevenger of Clinton county has been talking with a number of legislators on the subject He told them they were taking a long chance on the legality of the election of these delegates and might jeopardize the entire work of the constitutional convention if they passed the Green bill

Clevenger says the constitution plainly provides that the delegates to the convention must be elected in the same manner as members of the general assembly which is on a partisan ticket and that delegates to the constitutional convention must be elected in the same manner

Clevenger also contends that the non partisan ballot such as Senator Green proposes will disfranchise many illiterate voters who only know how to vote in the circle under the rooster or the eagle

The bill vetoed by Governor Harmon last winter provided that when ten per cent of the electors of a municipality petitioned council that it should hold an election to see if Sunday baseball should be suspended Governor Harmon held that this was unconstitutional

Columbus O Jan 18 — While Senator Dean and other leaders of the labor forces in the legislature were preparing bills that they would demand a legislative investigation of Wayne B Wheeler's charges that the liquor interests are raising a corruption fund to pass the Dean labor bill Wheeler was reported as making a charge in another public statement

In the latest attack on the liquor people Wheeler who is secretary of the Anti saloon league aims at Peter Andrea representative of the Ohio Brewers association who exposed Wheeler yesterday After declaring that a majority of the members of the house is against the Dean bill in the county local option law Wheeler says

Mr Andrea knows this and he also knows that the liquor interests will do their utmost to wipe out that majority in the house by the use of money I asserted my disbelief that the legislature could be corrupted by money and vote against the country's best interests Mr Andrea on this point speaks stronger than that of the liquor interests whom he represents

DEATH SENTENCE FOR ANARCHISTS

Tokyo in Wild State of Excitement.

SOCIALISTS' CASES ATTRACT ATTENTION

They Claim They're Simply Railroaded.

The Prisoners Receive Sentence with Shouts of "Banzai" and "Long Live Anarchy" and for While It Seems That Riot Would Follow Pronouncing of Death Sentence by the Judge

Tokyo Jan 18 —The expected death sentence upon Dr D Kotoku his wife and twenty two other anarchists convicted of having conspired against the life of the Mikado was passed upon the prisoners today by Judge Joicsiro Tsuru

The conspirators were found guilty last December sentence being deferred until today to give a sen blance of consideration to the many protests that were received again the execution of the anarchist Many of these protests came from America the novelist, Jack Londo being one of the signers of a big petition asking for clemency

Two of the twenty-four prisoners escaped death sentences Nitta being sent to prison for eleven years and Numura for eight

The prisoners received their sentences with shouts of banzai and long live anarchy' and for a while it seemed that a riot would follow the pronouncing of the sentences

Madame Kotoku accepted her sentence as cheerfully as the men She was smiling as she was led handcuffed from the court-room

Kotoku the leader of the band formerly lived in San Francisco

A Special Trial

For many years he has been prominent in the Socialist movement in Japan and a few years ago became a rampant anarchist

Tokyo is in a high state of excitement owing to the interest the Socialists cases have attracted all over the world Several newspapers here have given great prominence to the foreign protests against sentencing the twenty four persons and today's action was awaited with great interest

The twenty four Socialists were given a special trial which was practically a star chamber session Their sympathizers assert that they never had an opportunity to present an adequate defense and were railroaded They were convicted of plotting a reign of terror in Tokyo during which they proposed to assassinate the emperor and other royal personages and ministers of state They were also accused of conspiring to dynamite all the state buildings and many rich residences

To Make Protest

New York Jan 18 — The execution of the twenty five Japanese anarchists condemned to death today for conspiracy against the Mikado will not be accomplished without a protest from every civilized nation in the world according to a statement made today to the United Press by Morris Hillquit one of the leaders of the Socialist party in New York and a delegate to the recent international meeting

The international Socialist bureau in Brussels Hillquit said was instructed by our recent convention to voice a worldwide protest in the event that the Japanese government sentenced the so called anarchists to death We anticipated the death sentence and will now push the matter of a protest

Socialists of every country will join in this movement and we will make it one of the biggest things the kind on record We hope to make it so impressive that Japan will reconsider the action taken today and commute the sentence of death which was absolutely unwarranted by the facts as we believe

Japan is trying to check the growing Socialist wave in that country and seize this opportunity to strike fear into the hearts of the Socialists generally

MARION'S BIG GAIN SUBJECT OF COMMENT

An Increase of 53.7 Per Cent. in the Past Decade.

GROWTH IS REGARDED AS VERY REMARKABLE

Findlay and Galion Suffer Loss in Population—But Few Cities Having Population in Excess of 5,000 Lose in Numbers—Many Show a Very Fine Increase.

Marion's population of 18,232, as announced by the census bureau and published in Saturday's Star, was the subject of considerable comment throughout the city. When it is taken into consideration that its increase of 53.7 per cent in the decade is fifth in the cities having a population between 10,000 and 25,000, the growth is more remarkable than one would first suppose.

For example, Findlay in Hancock county fell off in population during the past ten years In 1900 it had a population of 17,613, while the census for 1910 gives it a population of 14,825. Galion also suffered a loss, due, probably, to the fact that so many railroad men have moved to Marion within the past few years

Galion's population in 1900 was 7,282 and the census in 1910 gives it as 7,214, thus a slight falling off is shown

All of the eighty-two cities in Ohio, with a population in excess of 5,000, the only cities which showed decreases in population, in addition to Findlay and Galion, were Defiance, Circleville, Marrietta and Newburg

The increases in the cities having a population between 10,000 and 25,000 were

Norwood, 149 7 per cent; Elyria, 68 6; Alliance, 68 0; Steubenville, 58 0 Marion, 53 7; Lancaster, 45 6; Middletown, 42 7, Ashtabula, 41 0; Cambridge, 37 4, Portsmouth, 31 3; Bellair, 30 6, Warren, 29 9; East Liverpool, 23.6; Mansfield, 17.7, Massillon, 16 2; Chillicothe. 11 8; Ironton, 10 7, Piqua, 9 9; Tiffin, 8.1; Sandusky, 1 6

Matter of Collection of Liquor Tax from Local People.

TREASURER WANTS PETITIONS DISMISSED

January Term of Court Will Give the Judges Plenty of Business. The Docket Contains 309 Cases the Largest in the History of the County—But Few Divorce Cases.

Answers asking the dissolution of temporary injunctions, obtained by Charles Miller, Herman Kalkbrenner, Edward J Burke, Charles Bausinger, John and James O Keefe and George Ackerman, restraining the collection of the liquor tax in dry territory, were filed in the common pleas court by County Treasurer W C Wottring, through Prosecuting Attorney Charles L. Justice, late Saturday afternoon

On account of alleged trafficking in "spiritous, vinous, malt and other intoxicating liquors," the plaintiffs in the action were placed on the liquor duplicate in the following amounts

Miller, $645 61, with penalty of $129 12; Kalkbrenner, $645 61, with penalty of $129.12; Burke, $645 61, with penalty of $129 12; John and James O'Keeffe, $686 81, with penalty of $137.36, Bausinger, $648.35, with penalty of $129 67; Ackerman, $686.81, with penalty of $137 36

buy. Certainly the literary market

When the January term of the common pleas court is begun a week from Tuesday, the docket will be fairly running over with cases—309, which is the largest number in the history of the county

Many of these have been carried over from term to term During the October term, which closed January 2, only fifty-seven cases were heard and dismissed The major part of these were actions in divorce, so that the new docket contains fewer divorce cases than any docket in years Out of the 309 cases fifteen of them are for divorce.

OLDEST PASTOR OF MARION PRESBYTERY

Rev. Milton W. Brown Passes to Eternity.

MINISTER REACHES EXTREME OLD AGE

Occupies Pulpits of the Ostrander and Old Stone Churches Eight Years—Lacks Four Months of Being Ninety Years of Age—A Review of His Life as a Minister.

In regard to the passing of Rev. Milton W. Brown the Delaware Gazette, of Saturday, says:

"Rev. Milton W. Brown, former pastor of the Ostrander and Old Stone Presbyterian churches, and probably the oldest living minister of the Marion Presbytery, died at his home on north Liberty street, on Saturday morning about 2:15 o'clock. Rev Mr. Brown suffered a stroke of apoplexy last Wednesday, since which time he has been unconscious, and his death was not unexpected. He lacked but four months of being ninety years of age

Rev. Mr Brown was born May 20, 1821, in Wayne county, on a farm adjoining the little village of Old Edenburg, now called Applecreek, and was the oldest in a family of thirteen children. The home in which he was raised was considered a fine mansion in its day. He and his sisters attended the district school where their father taught for many years during the winters, devoting the other months to the management of his farm Early in his teens, during a severe illness, Milton made a vow to God that if He raised him up from his bed of sickness, he would devote his life to the work of the Master.

Upon his restoration to health he taught school in Kentucky and earned money to take him to what is now Washington and Jefferson college in Pennsylvania, where he graduated in June, 1848 He then taught in Ligonier academy for a number of terms, thereby earning money to take him to the theological seminary at Allegheny, Pennsylvania He graduated from that institution in 1851, and was licensed to preach the same year by the Presbytery of Coshocton later consolidated with the Presbytery of Wooster The same year he began his work as pastor at Hopewell and Nashville where he remained for twelve years. Sickness then compelled him to give up his work

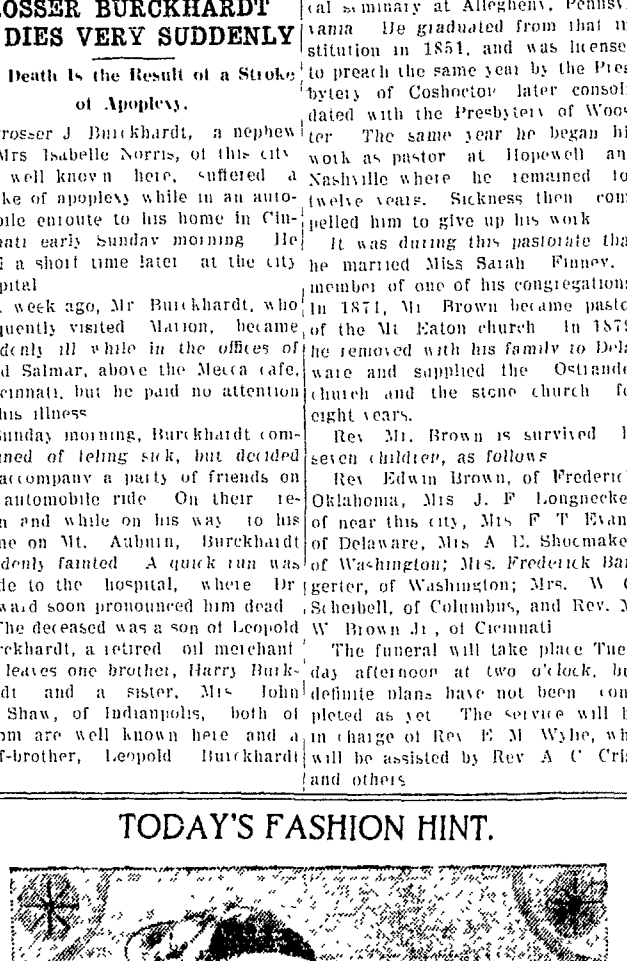
It was during this pastorate that he married Miss Sarah Finney, a member of one of his congregations In 1871, Mr Brown became pastor of the Mt Eaton church In 1879, he removed with his family to Delaware and supplied the Ostrander church and the stone church for eight years.

Rev Mr. Brown is survived by seven children, as follows

Rev Edwin Brown, of Frederick Oklahoma, Mrs J. F Longnecker of near this city, Mrs F T Evans, of Delaware, Mrs A E. Shoemaker, of Washington; Mrs. Frederick Bangerter, of Washington; Mrs. W C Scheibell, of Columbus, and Rev. M W Brown Jr., of Cincinnati

The funeral will take place Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, but definite plans have not been completed as yet The service will be in charge of Rev E M Wylie, who will be assisted by Rev A C Crist and others

TODAY'S FASHION HINT.



FURS ARE MASSIVE; FROCKS ARE FRAGILE

The combination of heavy, luxurious furs with diaphanous gowns is strikingly effective Over the dainty theater and restaurant gowns of the winter the carriage wrap is frequently only an arrangement of fur coming to the waist Those big neckpieces are made of two or three animal skins, and the huge muff also is or this luxurious plan. The neckpiece and muff pictured are of black marten—or skunk—fur, and on the hat—a new model in the "sundown" shape—is also a band of the dark fur The gown is of gray chiffon with a flame red satin hem and embroidery in gray, white and coral.
